What difference will it make?

An anonymised version of the data we collect is available online from the Norwegian Social Science Data Service archive, and can be used by anyone. The study provides the most reliable, independent information collected on the real views of people in Europe – and what we find out often doesn’t agree with the politicians.

Organisations quoting the study include national charities like Age UK, Oxfam and National Council for Voluntary Organisations, not to mention its extensive use by university researchers and the media.

About us

NatCen believe that research has the power to make life better. By understanding people’s lives and what they think about the issues that affect them, we give the public a powerful and influential role in shaping decisions and services. We are an independent, not for profit organisation.

The study is strictly confidential and your answers will be treated in accordance with the 1998 Data Protection Act. The findings will not identify you or your family because your name and address will not be passed on to anyone outside NatCen Social Research.

For more information

If you’d like to know more, or have any questions, please visit www.natcen.ac.uk/living, call us free on 0800 652 4570 or email us at LivingInEnglandToday@natcen.ac.uk.

NatCen Social Research, Kings House, 101-135 Kings Road, Brentwood, Essex CM14 4Jk. Tel. 0800 652 4570. Company limited by guarantee. Reg No. 4392418. A Charity registered in England and Wales (1091768) and in Scotland (SC038454)

What is Living in England about?

This study will find out what people really think about the big issues affecting their communities in 2014. It’s an opportunity for all those taking part to give their opinion on everything from health and education, to immigration and their trust in politicians.

The research has been going since 2002, and is part of a larger study being carried out across Europe. The results will help us understand how our society is changing over time, and how this compares with people elsewhere on the continent.

How much do you trust the police? How well do you think the health service is run? What do you think about immigration? Do you think European integration has gone too far? Are our MPs doing a good job? We want to find out your true views.

Living in England 2014

A brief introduction
Our place in Europe

65% of people in the UK say they do not trust the European Parliament, the highest in Europe. Up from 59% in 2002.

Are we a nation of couch potatoes?

People in the UK are physically active, for 20 minutes or more, an average of 5 days per week.

In contrast, in Spain people averaged just three and a half active days per week, with 23% not exercising at all.

How religious are we?

45% of people in the UK say they belong to a religion, and 18% pray at least once a day.

Cultural shift?

36% of people believe that the country’s cultural life is undermined by immigration.
What is Living in Scotland about?

This study will find out what people really think about the big issues affecting their communities in 2014. It’s an opportunity for all those taking part to give their opinion on everything from health and education, to immigration and their trust in politicians.

The research has been going since 2002, and is part of a larger study being carried out across Europe. The results will help us understand how our society is changing over time, and how this compares with people elsewhere on the continent.

How much do you trust the police? How well do you think the health service is run? What do you think about immigration? Do you think European integration has gone too far? Are our MPs doing a good job? We want to find out your true views.

What difference will it make?

An anonymised version of the data we collect is available online from the Norwegian Social Science Data Service archive, and can be used by anyone. The study provides the most reliable, independent information collected on the real views of people in Europe – and what we find out often doesn’t agree with the politicians.

Organisations quoting the study include national charities like Age UK, Oxfam and National Council for Voluntary Organisations, not to mention its extensive use by university researchers and the media.

About us

NatCen believe that research has the power to make life better. By understanding people’s lives and what they think about the issues that affect them, we give the public a powerful and influential role in shaping decisions and services. We are an independent, not for profit organisation.

The study is strictly confidential and your answers will be treated in accordance with the 1998 Data Protection Act. The findings will not identify you or your family because your name and address will not be passed on to anyone outside NatCen Social Research.

For more information

If you’d like to know more, or have any questions, please visit www.natcen.ac.uk/living, call us free on 0800 652 4570 or email us at LivingInScotlandToday@natcen.ac.uk.

Our place in Europe
65% of people in the UK say they do not trust the European Parliament, the highest in Europe. Up from 59% in 2002.

How religious are we?
45% of people in the UK say they belong to a religion, and 18% pray at least once a day.

Are we a nation of couch potatoes?
People in the UK are physically active, for 20 minutes or more, an average of 5 days per week.

In contrast, in Spain people averaged just three and a half active days per week, with 23% not exercising at all.

Cultural shift?
36% of people believe that the country’s cultural life is undermined by immigration.
What difference will it make?

An anonymised version of the data we collect is available online from the Norwegian Social Science Data Service archive, and can be used by anyone. The study provides the most reliable, independent information collected on the real views of people in Europe – and what we find out often doesn’t agree with the politicians.

Organisations quoting the study include national charities like Age UK, Oxfam and National Council for Voluntary Organisations, not to mention its extensive use by university researchers and the media.

About us

NatCen believe that research has the power to make life better. By understanding people’s lives and what they think about the issues that affect them, we give the public a powerful and influential role in shaping decisions and services. We are an independent, not for profit organisation.

The study is strictly confidential and your answers will be treated in accordance with the 1998 Data Protection Act. The findings will not identify you or your family because your name and address will not be passed on to anyone outside NatCen Social Research.

For more information

If you’d like to know more, or have any questions, please visit www.natcen.ac.uk/living, call us free on 0800 652 4570 or email us at LivingInWalesToday@natcen.ac.uk.

NatCen Social Research, Kings House, 101-135 Kings Road, Brentwood, Essex CM14 4LX. Tel: 0800 608 367. Company limited by guarantee. Reg No. 4392418. A Charity registered in England and Wales (1091768) and in Scotland (SC038454)

What is Living in Wales about?

This study will find out what people really think about the big issues affecting their communities in 2014. It’s an opportunity for all those taking part to give their opinion on everything from health and education, to immigration and their trust in politicians.

The research has been going since 2002, and is part of a larger study being carried out across Europe. The results will help us understand how our society is changing over time, and how this compares with people elsewhere on the continent.

How much do you trust the police? How well do you think the health service is run? What do you think about immigration? Do you think European integration has gone too far? Are our MPs doing a good job? We want to find out your true views.

Living in Wales 2014

A brief introduction
Our place in Europe

65% of people in the UK say they do not trust the European Parliament, the highest in Europe. Up from 59% in 2002.

How religious are we?

45% of people in the UK say they belong to a religion, and 18% pray at least once a day.

Are we a nation of couch potatoes?

People in the UK are physically active, for 20 minutes or more, an average of 5 days per week.

In contrast, in Spain people averaged just three and a half active days per week, with 23% not exercising at all.

Cultural shift?

36% of people believe that the country’s cultural life is undermined by immigration.
What is Living in Northern Ireland about?

This study will find out what people really think about the big issues affecting their communities in 2014. It’s an opportunity for all those taking part to give their opinion on everything from health and education, to immigration and their trust in politicians.

The research has been going since 2002, and is part of a larger study being carried out across Europe. The results will help us understand how our society is changing over time, and how this compares with people elsewhere on the continent.

How much do you trust the police? How well do you think the health service is run? What do you think about immigration? Do you think European integration has gone too far? Are our MPs doing a good job? We want to find out your true views.

What difference will it make?

An anonymised version of the data we collect is available online from the Norwegian Social Science Data Service archive, and can be used by anyone. The study provides the most reliable, independent information collected on the real views of people in Europe – and what we find out often doesn’t agree with the politicians.

Organisations quoting the study include national charities like Age UK, Oxfam and National Council for Voluntary Organisations, not to mention its extensive use by university researchers and the media.

About us

The Central Survey Unit (CSU) is managing the Northern Ireland fieldwork on behalf of NatCen Social Research. CSU is the leading social survey research organisation in Northern Ireland and is one of the main businesses of the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA).

The study is strictly confidential and your answers will be treated in accordance with the 1998 Data Protection Act. The findings will not identify you or your family because your name and address will not be passed on to anyone outside NatCen Social Research.

For more information

If you’d like to know more, or have any questions, please visit www.natcen.ac.uk/living, call us on 02890 348197 or email us at norma.broomfield@dfpni.gov.uk.

NatCen Social Research, Kings House, 101-135 Kings Road, Brentwood, Essex CM14 4LX Tel. 0800 526 397. Company limited by guarantee. Reg No. 4392418. A Charity registered in England and Wales (1097156) and in Scotland (SC084454)
Our place in Europe
65% of people in the UK say they do not trust the European Parliament, the highest in Europe. Up from 59% in 2002.

How religious are we?
45% of people in the UK say they belong to a religion, and 18% pray at least once a day.

Are we a nation of couch potatoes?
People in the UK are physically active, for 20 minutes or more, an average of 5 days per week.
In contrast, in Spain people averaged just three and a half active days per week, with 23% not exercising at all.

Cultural shift?
36% of people believe that the country’s cultural life is undermined by immigration.