Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The Social Democratic Party (Sozialdemokratische Partei Österreichs, or SPÖ) is a social democratic/center-left political party that was founded in 1888 as the Social Democratic Worker's Party (Sozialdemokratische Arbeiterpartei, or SDAP), when Victor Adler managed to unite the various opposing factions. The party was reconstituted as the Socialist Party of Austria in 1945 (renamed to the Social Democratic Party of Austria in 1991) after being outlawed in 1934. Between 1970 and 1999, it governed the country either alone or with a junior partner, and all but two of the Presidents of Austria since 1945 have either been members of the SPÖ or nominated by it. Originally having a high following among blue-collar workers, it sought to expand its focus on middle class and white-collar workers in the late 1950s. In the 1990s, it started viewing privatization of nationalised industries more openly, after large losses of state owned enterprises came to light. Along with the conservative Austrian People's Party (ÖVP), the SPÖ is one of the two major political parties in Austria, and has ties to the Austrian Trade Union Federation (ÖGB) and the Austrian Chamber of Labour (AK). The party is currently in opposition and is led by Pamela Rendi-Wagner. (see: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Social_Democratic_Party_of_Austria) 2. The People's Party (Österreichische Volkspartei, or ÖVP) was found by leaders of the former Christian Social Party in 1945 as a conservative/center-right party with loose ties to the Catholic Church. Between 1945 and 1970 it provided the Chancellor of Austria and since 1987 it has continuously been in government, its leader Wolfgang Schüssel being Chancellor between 2000 and 2007. It finds support from farmers, large and small business owners, and lay Catholic groups, but also from voters without party affiliation, with strongholds in the rural regions of Austria. In federal governance, the ÖVP is currently the larger partner in a coalition government with the FPÖ, with ÖVP party leader Sebastian Kurz as Chancellor of Austria. (see: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Austrian_People's_Party) 3. The Freedom Party (Freiheitliche Partei Österreichs, or FPÖ) is a right-wing populist political party that was founded in 1955 as a successor to the Federation of Independents. According to polls, it mainly attracts votes from young people and workers, predominantly males. Their nationalist rhetoric targets Muslims, immigrants and the European Union. The party steadily gained support after Jörg Haider took over leadership of the party in 1986, until it attracted about 27% of the vote in the 1999 elections. After being reduced to 10% in the 2002 elections, they achieved 26.0% in 2017. They are currently governing as the smaller partner in a coalition government with party leader H.C. Strache as Vice-Chancellor (own extensions of http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Politics_of_Austria#Freedom_Party_of_Austria) 4. The Liste Peter Pilz formed as an break-away from the Austrian Green Party and achieved in 2017 4.4% of the votes. They are currently in opposition. On 4 November 2017, Pilz resigned his seat in Parliament amid sexual assault allegations. (see: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/NOW_%E2%80%93_Pilz) 5. The Greens were formed in 1986 with the name Grüne Alternative, following the merger of the more conservative Green party Vereinte Grüne Österreichs (United Greens of Austria VGÖ, founded 1982) and the more progressive party Alternative Liste Österreichs (Alternative List Austria, ALÖ, founded 1982). Since 1993, the party has carried the official name Die Grünen – Die Grüne Alternative (Grüne), but refers to itself in English as "Austrian Greens". There are still differences between the former members of the old Alternative and VGÖ factions within the party, which is reflected in the different opinions between the national party and the state parties. Apart from ecological issues such as environmental protection, the Greens also campaign for the rights of minorities and advocate a socio-ecological (ökosozial) tax reform. The Greens did not manage to enter parliament again in 2017 and are currently not member of the Austrian Nationalrat. Their basic values according to their charter in 2001 are: "direct democracy, nonviolence, ecology, solidarity, feminism and self-determination". (see: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Greens_%E2%80%93_The_Green_Alternative) 6. The Communist Party of Austria established in 1918, it is one of the world's oldest Communist parties. The KPÖ was banned between 1933 and 1945 under both the Austrofascist regime and the Nazi German control of Austria after the 1938 Anschluss. It played an important role in the Austrian resistance against the Nazis. The party currently holds two seats in the Styrian Landtag (state parliament), but has not had representation in the National Council (Nationalrat, Austria's federal parliament) since 1959. It is part of the New European Left Forum (NELF) and the Party of the European Left. (see: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Communist_Party_of_Austria) 7. NEOS is a young political movement founded in October 2012, contested the 2013 legislative election on a joint electoral list with the Young Liberals Austria and Liberal Forum. On 25 January 2014 NEOS formally absorbed the Liberal Forum, creating "NEOS - The New Austria and Liberal Forum". In March 2014, it also absorbed the formerly independent Young Liberals (JuLis), forming the party's youth wing JUNOS – Young liberal NEOS. NEOS became a full member of the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe (ALDE) on 2 May 2014. In the 2014 European elections held on 25 May 2014, the party received 8.1% of the national vote, and returned a single MEP. The party supports direct democracy using referenda and the ending of conscription, and opposes increased property taxes and public financing of political parties. (see: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/NEOS_%E2%80%93_The_New_Austria)

8. G!LT - My Vote Counts! is a political party in Austria. It was founded on 14 August 2016 by Roland Düringer, a popular Austrian comedian. It defines itself not as a party but as an un-party proposing a new, decentralised democratic system somewhat similar to demarchy. The party is anti-establishment and criticises the government of the many by only a few elected politicians (see: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/My_Vote_Counts!).

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Groen (left) Flemish progressive and ecologist party. Works closely together with its Francophone counterpart Ecolo. Good score at the federal elections in 1999. Part of the purple-green federal government under prime minister Verhofstadt. Kicked out of government after defeat in the federal elections in 2003. Since then, it won votes election after election but very slowly. At the 2014 elections 5.3% of the Belgian votes went to Groen. In opposition during fieldwork period. 2. CD&V (center) Flemish Christian democratic party. One of the three traditional political movements in Belgium (liberals, socialists and Christian democrats). Had a huge political influence on post-war Belgium. Was part of the government in every coalition and produced a lot of prime ministers. At the start of 21st century its influence started to wane. Formed a cartel with a much smaller but very Flemish nationalistic party N-VA in 2004. Won election after election but in 2008 the cartel with N-VA ceased to exist. At the next federal elections of 2010 CD&V has got the lowest score in history, while the former cartel partner N-VA became the biggest party in Belgium. CD&V is part of the government coalition during the fieldwork period. 3. N-VA (right) Flemish-nationalistic, conservative, republican, economically ultraliberal. Was formed in 2001 after the split of Volksunie (also Flemish nationalists). Flirted with the electoral threshold of 5% at the federal elections in 2003. Formed a cartel with CD&V (see above) in 2004 and together they won elections. In 2008 the cartel with CD&V ceased to exist. At the federal elections of 2010 - where the communitarian relations stood central - N-VA became the biggest Flemish party. At the federal elections in 2014 was clearly the biggest party in Belgium. N-VA was part of the government, but left the coalition during fieldwork in december 2018. 4. Lijst Decker (right) Flemish right liberal, republican, neoliberal, libertarian political party founded in 2007 by former Open VLD senator Jean Marie Dedecker. Good result in first few years but lost heavily in 2010. The result was even worse in 2014. No representatives anymore in the Kamer/Chambre. 5. SP.A (left) Flemish social democratic party and one of the three traditional movement in Belgium. Very strong electoral scores at the start of the 21st century under chairmanship of Steve Stevaert. Lost seats since then. Biggest Flemish opposition party during the fieldwork period. 6. PVDA+ (extreme left) Marxist-Leninist, unitarian political party that was formed in 1979. Strong links with the Francophone PTB. Quite good scores in the most recent elections (in the French part of Belgium) but still small compared to the other parties. In opposition during the fieldwork period. 7. Vlaams Belang (extreme right) Flemish nationalistic, rightwing conservative political party and is know for their pursuit for an independent Flanders, its opposition to immigrants who - according to VB - are reluctant against integration or assimilation to Western standards, defense of traditional values and opposition to the alleged advance of political islam and islamic fundamentalism in Europe. Based on their "racistic values" of VB, the other parties decided that rapprochement with that party is undesirable at every political level (so called cordon sanitaire). Grew steadily in the 90's with a peak in 2004. It became the largest political party in Flanders. At the federal elections in 2007 the party stagnated but at the regional elections of 2009 they lost one third of all votes. A second electoral defeat followed at the federal elections of 2010 and in 2014 it became almost insignificant. In opposition during the fieldwork period. 8. Open VLD (center right) Flemish, progressive liberal political party. Is a descendant of the first political party in Belgium, the Liberal Party (1846). Guy Verhofstadt transformed the party and renamed it VLD in 1992. After the Dioxin crisis in 1999, the VLD achieved a good score and became the biggest party in Flanders. Guy Verhofstadt became prime minister of the federal government and Patrick Dewael (also VLD) from the Flemish government (both in purple-green coalitions). At the federal elections in 2003 the party won again and Verhofstadt made a new (purple) coalition with him as prime minister. But leading up to the regional elections in 2004, the party was characterized by heavy clashes between figures at the top of the party. The party also abstained to vote on a bill granting foreigners to vote, although it was always said that the party opposed it. All this resulted in a very bad result in the Flemish elections in 2004. Also at the municipal and provincial elections in 2006 the party lost heavily.

For the federal elections of 2007 the party changed his name to Open VLD but they lost and the initiative to form a government went to the Christian-Democrats again. The regional elections of 2009 brought about a major defeat for the Open VLD. The party achieved a score of 14.6%, a decrease of 5.2% in comparison to 2004. On April 26, 2010 Open VLD left the federal governing coalition of Leterme II because the party saw no way out of the negotiations on the split of BHV and the reform of the state. New federal elections were necessary and on June 13, 2010 the party lost five seats in the Chamber to 13. In the most recent federal elections of 2014, Open VLD was one of the few parties that won votes next to the domination of N-VA. Is part of the governing coalition during the fieldwork period.

9. CDH (center left) French Christian-democratic and humanistic party and was given its name in 2002 (before PSC - Parti Social Chrétien). Has the same political roots as its Flemish counterpart CD&V (split in 1972). The party faced a crisis at the elections in 1999 due to two external events: the Dutroux affair and the dioxin crisis. PSC went into opposition at all levels of government and Joëlle Milquet became the new president of the party. Under her presidency PSC changed to CDH. At the federal elections of 2003 the party does not progress and remains in the opposition. But at the regional elections of 2004 CDH wins which enabled it to return to power in the Walloon Region, French Community and the Brussels-Capital, in coalition with the PS and Ecolo in Brussels-Capital. In 2007 the party won 5 seats in the Federal Parliament and CDH participated to the government of Leterme I after a long negotiation process. After the federal elections in 2010 and yet another long negotiation process, it was part of the governing coalition under Di Rupo. At the federal and regional elections of 2014 the party had to choose: form a regional government with PS in Wallonia and Brussels or form a federal government with MR as the only other Frenchspeaking party and tolerate the Flemish nationalistic party N-VA. It chose for the former and is thus not part of the federal coalition during the fieldwork period.

10. Ecolo (left) - Ecologistes Confédérés pour l'Organisation de Luttes Originales - is a French ecologist party, a sister of the Flemish Groen and has been small and insignificant until the elections of 1999. It achieved a score of 18% of the votes in Wallonia and 14% in Brussels-Capital. Joined the federal government coalition under Prime Minister Guy Verhofstadt. In the following years Ecolo has conflicts with other government parties. Bad elections in 2004. Fell below 10% and went in opposition. At the federal elections in 2007 Ecolo won again and doubled its representation in parliament but did not join the government coalition because sister party Groen was too weak. Groen and Ecolo formed a common parliamentary fraction. Ecolo again made a great leap forward in the regional elections in 2009. In the Walloon Regional Parliament it jumped from 3 to 14 seats. In Brussels from 7 to 16 seats. In Brussels, the Walloon Region and the French Community Ecolo joined the government coalition together with PS and CDH. In 2010 Ecolo could consolidate its 2007 federal result. At the elections of 2014 Ecolo lost about 1/3 of its electorate compared to 2010 and is back at the level of 2004. Ecolo is not part of the government coalition during the fieldwork period.

11. Front National (extreme right) is a French far-right political party and is an advocate for a unitary Belgian nationalism and is strongly against immigration. Founded in 1985 by Daniel Féret. In comparison to the Flemish far right party Vlaams Belang, FN always remained a fairly insignificant party except for some municipalities. In 1991 the party got his first seat in the Chamber. Two seats in 1995. At the regional elections in 1995 FN also won 2 seats in the Walloon parliament and 6 in the Brussels-Capital parliament. Their was a general decline at the federal and regional elections in 1999. In 2003 (federal) and 2004 (regional) the voting rate for the party rises again but not significantly. From then onwards it goes up and down again. The party is known for its internal problems and racist scandals. No representatives in the federal parliament.

12. MR (right, center right) is a French liberal party and was formed in 2002 by the merging of four existing parties. PRL (Parti Réformateur Libéral), the Francophone liberals and counterpart of the Flemish VLD. FDF (Front Démocratique des Francophones) a party which strongly defends the Francophone interests in the Brussels region. MCC (Mouvement des Citoyens pour le Changement) a movement torn from the PSC (now CDH) and PFF (Partei für Freiheit und Fortschritt), the sister party of PRL in the Germanophone region. At the federal elections of 2003 MR won 24 seats in the Chamber and went joined the government coalition under Prime Minister Guy Verhofstadt. After a tax scandal by Brussels Minister-President Ducarme MR experienced a loss at the regional elections in 2004 and was rejected into opposition at the coalitions for the Walloon region, the French community and the Brussels-capital region. But MR continues to participate in the federal government. There is a rivalry between MR and PS to be the biggest party in the french regions. Had to break up the cooperation with the communitarian radical FDF in order to join the government coalition. At the elections of 2014, the party won a little while PS - biggest competitor in Frenchspeaking Belgium - lost a bit, though PS is still the biggest party on the Frenchspeaking side. Big rivalry between those two parties immediately after the elections. CDH was in the middle of the bed and CDH chose for PS to form a Walloon and Brussels government. MR was furious and decided to form a federal government with MR as the only Frenchspeaking party (thus federal government has a minority on the Frenchspeaking side) in a government with N-VA, CD&V and Open VLD. MR was able to deliver the prime minister (Charles Michel). Heavy opposition from PS on MR during fieldwork.. especially on the fact that MR is in a government with N-VA (which has - according to PS - some racist individuals). Is part of the federal government coalition during fieldwork.

13. PS (left) is a French social-democratic political party. It's Flemish counterpart is SP.a. At the elections of 2010 it became the second largest party in the Chamber and the largest Francophone party. The PS is very commonly part of governing coalitions especially in the Francophone areas. Since 1999 and until 2014 the party was always part of the government coalition in the French Community, the Walloon Government, Brussels-Capital region and the German-speaking Community. The party, or its members, have from time to time been brought into connection with criminal activities and political scandals. At the elections of 2014 the party lost a few seats but still the biggest party on the Frenchspeaking side. Heavy rivalry between PS and MR after election (see above). Is part of the Walloon and Brussels government but not part of the federal government coalition. Heavy opposition on the government under prime minister Charles Michel (MR).

15. Parti Populaire (right) is a right wing liberal political party with a bilingual/federal structure (in Dutch 'Personenpartij') - but in fact primarily a Francophone party - which was formed in

	November 2009. The party manifesto emphasizes efficiency and disinterestedness in governance, plain speaking and individual autonomy. PP wants to reform the justice system and strengthen the Belgian federal government relative to the regions and communities. No representatives in the federal parliament. 16. DéFI (right, center right) was founded in 1964 as FDF. The party is a strong defender of Francophone interests in Brussels. The party is strong in Brussels and surrounding area, but is also active in the rest of Wallonia. From 2002 FDF was part of a cartel with MR. The cartel broke in 2011 due to communitarian disagreements with MR. In 2015 the party changed its name to the current DéFI and wants to move to a more social liberal course. It currently has two seats in the Chamber.

2. Electoral system
Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The primary legislative assembly at the national level is the Chamber (English) / Kamer (Dutch) / Chambre (French) of Representatives and is the most important 'house' of the Federal Parliament next to the Senate. The elections for this assembly are based on a system of open list proportional representation. Elections for the Chamber are held every 5 years. To obtain a representative distribution, the Chamber is composed of candidates from 11 constituencies. The constituencies follow the boundaries of the 10 provinces + Brussels Capital Region. Citizens have to be 18 years old to vote. Belgium is one of the few countries where voting is compulsory.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ) is a demo-christian and nationalistic political party and the main centre-right political party in Croatia. It is one of the two major contemporary political parties in Croatia, along with the centre-left Social Democratic Party (SDP). It is currently the largest party in the Croatian parliament. The HDZ ruled Croatia from 1990 before the country gained independence from Yugoslavia until 2000 and, in coalition with junior partners, from 2003 to 2011, and since 2016. HDZ has partnered with many political parties, usually parties that lean on the right of the political spectrum. 2. Social Democratic Party of Croatia (SDP) is a social-democratic political party and the largest party of the Croatian centre-left. The SDP is one of the two major political parties in Croatia, along with the centre-right Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ). It was the ruling party on two occasions (2000-2003 and 2011-2016) in coalition with its partners (HNS, HSS, IDS and HSU). 3. The Bridge of Independent Lists (Most) is a political party in Croatia founded in 2012 as a regionalist political platform. Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The Communist Party of Bohemia and Moravia (KSČM) is extreme-left party. It was formed in 1989 by the Congress of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia, which decided to create a party for the territories of Bohemia and Moravia. Its ideology is based primarily on Marxism and communism. In the past, the party was largely isolated, but recently it has become a supporting party of the minority cabinet of ANO 2011 and ČSSD. The party is stronger with older voters, with the majority of the membership being over 60. The membership base of the KSČM is steadily decreasing. The KSČM has never been part of any government coalition since the advent of democracy in Czech Republic in 1989, although it has always been part of the Parliament. European Parliament political group: European United Left - Nordic Green Left. In the last European Parliament elections, the party gained three seats. In the 2017 parliamentary elections, the party received 7,76 % of the vote for the Chamber of Deputies. This is its worst result ever, with the loss of more than a half of votes from last election it has won only 15 seats in the Chamber of Deputies. The party chairman is Vojtěch Filip. 2. The Czech Social Democratic Party (ČSSD) is a major left-wing political party in the Czech Republic. To support freedom, solidarity and justice, and to support the socially responsible development of country - these are the main goals of the party, as declared on its official website. The party is a member of the Socialist International and the Party of European Socialists. It claims to be inspired by Keynesianism and political ideology of social democracy. In the European Parliament, the party belongs to the Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats. The ČSSD currently has four elected seats in the European Parliament. The origin of the party can be traced back to the Austro-Hungarian times. The party has its current name since 1993. In the 2017 parliamentary elections, after leading an economically successful government with ANO 2011, the ČSSD obtained only 7,27 % of the votes and 15 off 200 seats. This is one of its worst results since 1993, although the party is part of the minority government led by ANO. The current chairman of the party is Jan Hamáček. 3. TOP 09 (Tradition Responsibility Prosperity 09) is a conservative centre-right party. It is noted for its support of the free market and the European Union. The party claims to be based on the platform of conservatism and fiscal responsibility with a strong emphasis on European Judeo-Christian tradition. TOP 09 is a member of the European People's Party. The party was established shortly before the 2010 parliamentary elections, in 2009, by Miroslav Kalousek, Minister of Finance in the Topolánek government, who left the KDU-ČSL. The party leader became the popular political figure Karel Schwarzenberg, Topolánek's Minister of Foreign Affairs. TOP 09 was led by Karel Schwarzenberg until November 2015. After the 2017 parliamentary elections, the party formed with other three parties (ODS, KDU-ČSL, STAN) "Democratic block" to cooperate effectively in the parliamentary opposition. In the elections, TOP 09 obtained only about 5 % of the total vote share and thus 7 of 200 seats in the Chamber of Deputies (after the breakup of its previous electoral alliance with STAN). The current party leader is Jiří Pospíšil. 4. ANO 2011 is a centre-right political party founded in 2012. It is based on the former movement Action of Dissatisfied Citizens founded in autumn of 2011 by agronomic oligarch Andrej Babiš. The main objectives of the party include fighting against corruption and unemployment, and improving the transport infrastructure. The party targets voters who are dissatisfied with traditional parties and the current situation in the country. In the European Parliament, the party belongs to the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe Group. ANO 2011 won 2014 Czech European Parliament election obtaining 16,13 % of votes and 4 seats. In the 2017 parliamentary elections, ANO 2011 became a winner party with the total amount of nearly 30% of votes and 78 seats in the Chamber of Deputies. The party formed a minority government with ČSSD, supported by KSČM. Andrej Babiš, the current Prime Minister, have been chairman of the party since its establishment. The party is currently the most popular party in the Czech Republic. 5. The Civic Democratic Party (ODS) had been for a long time the largest right-wing political party in the Czech Republic. The party was founded by Václav Klaus (President of the Czech Republic in the period 2003-2013) in 1991 as the pro-free market wing of the Civic Forum (political movement in the Czech part of Czechoslovakia established during the Velvet Revolution in 1989). Until 2013, the ODS had been the strongest governmental party. However, in the 2013 parliamentary election, the party was marginalized by only securing 16 seats in the Chamber of Deputies. Its ideology is mainly liberal and national conservatism, economic liberalism and euroscepticism. It is a member of the International Democrat Union and the Alliance of European Conservatives and Reformists. European Parliament political group: European Conservatives and Reformists. The ODS has two seats in the European Parliament. In the last parliamentary election the party gained 11% of votes, i.e. 25 seats and became a second biggest party in the Chamber of Deputies and the biggest opposition party. The current party leader is Petr Fiala.

	6. The Christian and Democratic Union - Czechoslovak People's Party (KDU-ČSL) is a medium sized, centrally-oriented party. It expresses particularly Christian democratic views. Ideology of the party includes social conservatism, Christian democracy and regionalism. It is a member of the Centrist Democrat International and European People's Party. The KDUČSL is one of the oldest Czech political parties, it was originally created in 1919 as Czechoslovak People's Party (ČSL), reuniting other Catholic parties. After the Velvet Revolution in 1989, the ČSL attempted to shed its compromised figures and policies of the past: this included a change of name in 1992 after the merger with the Christian Democratic Union. The KDUČSL has relatively low but stable support of voters (6-10 %), which is strongest in the traditionally Catholic rural areas in Moravia. The party has been the most frequent member of the coalition government since 1993, because of its ability to cooperate with parties on the right and on the left as well. In the last parliamentary election the party gained 5,80% of votes, i.e. 10 seats. The current party leader is Pavel Bělobrádek. 7. Czech Pirate Party (Piráti) was founded in 2009. Economically the party ideology contains social liberalism, with focus on modern digital technologies - e-Government, government transparency. The party is a member of Pirate Parties International and European Pirates (PPEU). The party is affiliated with, and signed up to the manifesto of, the pan-European political movement Democracy in Europe Movement 2025 (DiEM25). The party won its first elections in 2012, with Libor Michálek as a first Pirate Senator. In local elections 2014 the party entered many local assemblies, including the first Pirate Mayor in Mariánské Lázně. Since the elections 2017 is the party also present in the Chamber of Deputies with 22 seats (and more than 10% of votes). In the local elections 2018 the party ranked second in Prague and its electoral leader Zdeněk Hřib became the Mayor. The party leader is Ivan Bartoš. 8. Freedom and direct democracy - Tomio Okamura (SPD) was founded in May 2015 by Tomio Okamura and Radim Fiala after a number of MPs split from the parliamentary group of Dawn of Direct Democracy. Freedom and Direct Democracy is named after the European Parliament Eurosceptic political group Europe of Freedom and Direct Democracy. The party represents the right-wing, anti-immigration, nationalist and anti-EU visions. In the elections 2017 the party ranked fourth with more than 10% of votes and holds 22 seats in the Chamber of Deputies. It supports ad hoc the minority government of Andrej Babiš. In the local elections 2018 the party entered several assemblies esp. in northern parts of the country (Ústí region and Moravian-Silesian region). The current party leader is Tomio Okamura. 9. Mayors and Independents (STAN) grew out of four minor parties, including Independent Mayors for the Region, which allied itself with the liberal-conservative SNK European Democrats, and cooperated with the similarly liberal-conservative TOP 09 until 2016. In promoting the principle of subsidiarity, STAN encourages localism, decentralisation, reduced bureaucracy and corruption clampdown. It is a centrist party, promoting also European integration. In the 2013 election to the Chamber of Deputies, STAN won five seats on the TOP 09 list, in the 2017 election to the Chamber of Deputies, STAN won six seats (5,18% of votes). It has its representatives in many local assemblies, in regions, in Senate and in European Parliament as well. The current party leader is Petr Gazdík.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Chamber of Deputies has 200 members, elected for a four year term by electoral system of proportional representation. All citizens of Czechia who have reached 18 years of age are eligible to vote. Every citizen of Czechia who has the right to vote and who has attained the age of twenty-one years may be elected to the Chamber of Deputies. Voting for the Chamber of Deputies is based on party candidate lists, and each voter can use up to four preferential votes to change the order of candidates. Czechia is divided into 14 electoral districts, which correspond to the 14 administrative regions. The regions differ greatly in population, so the number of representatives elected from each region varies. In order to enter the Chamber of Deputies, a party must win at least 5 % of votes. A recalculation of votes into mandates is realized on a regional level in two rounds. Votes are translated into seats using the D'Hondt method.

Description of political parties listed above	1. The Estonian Reform Party (Estonian: Eesti Reformierakond) is a centre-right, free market liberal party in Estonia. The Estonian Reform Party was founded on 18 November 1994 joining together the Reform Party — a splinter from the Pro Patria National Coalition (RKEI) — and the Estonian Liberal Democratic Party (ELDP). As the Reform Party has participated in most of the government coalitions in Estonia since the mid-1990s, its influence has been significant, especially regarding Estonia's free market and low taxes policies. The party has been a full member of Liberal International since 1996, having been an observer member between 1994–1996, and a full member of the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe (ALDE) Party. The party is supported predominantly by young, well-educated, urban professionals. 2. The Estonian Centre Party (Estonian: Eesti Keskerakond) is a centrist and social liberal political party in Estonia. The party was founded on 12 October 1991 from the basis of the Popular Front of Estonia after several parties split from it. At that time, the party was called People's Centre Party (Rahvakeskerakond) in order to differentiate from the smaller Rural Centre Party (Maa-Keskerakond). The party claims that its goal is the formation of a strong middle class in Estonia. The Centre Party declares itself as "middle class liberal party"; however, against the backdrop of Estonia's economic liberal policies, the Centre Party has a reputation of having more left-leaning policies. The Party is a member of the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe (ALDE). The Centre Party has become by far the most popular party among Russians in Estonia. 3. Pro Patria (Estonian: Isamaa) is a national conservative political party in Estonia. It was founded on 4 June 2006 when two conservative parties, Pro Patria Union and Res Publica Party merged. It was formerly known as The Union of Pro Patria and Res Publica but shortened the name in May 2018. The party is a member of the European People's Party (EPP). The party is supported predominantly by ethnic Estonians. 4. The Social Democratic Party (Estonian: Sotsiaaldemokraatlik Erakond, SDE) is a social democratic party in Estonia. The SDE was formed as Estonia's social-democratic movements merged in 1990. The party was formerly known as the Moderate People's Party (Estonian: Rahvaerakond Mõõdukad). The SDE has been a member of the Party of European Socialists since 16 May 2003 and a member of the Socialist International since November 1990. In spite of its nominal ideology, it has only governed with the right-wing parties. 5. Estonian Greens (Estonian: Erakond Eestimaa Rohelised) is an Estonian green political party. The green environmentalist campaign, the Estonian Green Movement (Estonian: Eesti Roheline Liikumine) was established in May 1988. The Estonian Green Party was established on 19 August 1989, and a rival Green Party in May 1990. After 2 years of fragmentation the party Estonian Greens was established on December 1991. In the parliamentary elections held in March 2007, the Estonian Greens received 7.1% of the votes, and thus held six seats in the Riigikogu until 2011. The Greens dropped out from the Parliament in 2011 elections. The party is currently without parliamentary representation. 6. The Conservative Peoples Party of Estonia (Estonian: Eesti Konservatiivne Rahvaerakond, EKRE) is a national conservative political party in Estonia. The party was founded in March 2012 when the agrarian centrist party People's Union of Estonia and the pressure group Estonian Patriotic Movement merged. Ideologically, the party is a descendant of the Estonian ethno-nationalist camp, which dates back to the Singing Revolution. The party sees the survival of Estonian ethnicity as its main objective, and many of its policies are directed towards providing support to young Estonian families, lowering emigration of Estonians and preventing immigration from outside of the European Union. It is also eurosceptic and wishes to implement Swiss-style direct democracy. In the parliamentary election of 2015, the party entered the Riigikogu with 7 seats. At the same time it is the fourth largest Estonian party by membership size. 9. The Estonian Independence Party (Estonian: Eesti Iseseisvuspartei, EIP) is a far-right nationalist political party in Estonia. The party, founded in 1999, is a successor to the Estonian Future Party. One of the principal aims of the party is the withdrawal of Estonia from the European Union. The party is without parliamentary representation. 10. Individual candidates - individual candidates without political party affiliation. 11. The Estonian Free Party (Estonian: Eesti Vabaerakond) is an Estonian centre-right political party. The nonprofit Estonian Free Party Founding Group was founded in January 2014. Originally it was to be founded by two organizations, Free Patriotic Citizen and Better Estonia, but the latter decided to withdraw. Commentators have argued, that the Estonian Free Party lacks a clear ideology. The party advocates raising the personal income tax, while on the other hand also raising the non-taxable basic exemption to support the poorer majority of taxpayers. The party's program also includes increased taxes on alcohol, tobacco, and confectionery. In economic policy, the party supports a relatively liberal approach, especially to support small

	businesses. The party has advocated reduction of state funding of political parties. The party gained 8 seats after passing the 5-percent threshold in the 2015 Estonian parliamentary elections. 12. The Party of People's Unity (Rahva Ühtsuse Erakond). Was established in 2014. Has been classified as conservative, anti immigration, anti EU, liberal right wing party. Does not have any seats at the Parliament.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The proportional representation system applies in Estonia in both Riigikogu and local council elections, which is also the dominant system elsewhere in Europe. The proportional representation system may be seen as the right choice for Estonian society, where the spectrum of political sentiment and orientation is varied and the democratic mechanisms for defending interests have not yet had time to crystallise. The proportional representation system gives rise to a situation where one party is unable to achieve an absolute majority of votes and where on average 4-6 political forces are elected a representative body. For elections to the Riigikogu there is a three-phase cycle of distributing mandates (personal mandate, electoral list mandate, compensation mandate), which implies the transfer of votes between candidates on the same list. As a result of such procedures, candidates for whom a voter has not voted may find themselves elected. Undoubtedly this principle decreases the legitimacy of the deputy and his or her involvement with the electorate in the people's eyes. The majority of systems of proportional representation also make use of an electoral threshold, with the aim of avoiding excessive fragmentation in the elected bodies. In Estonia the 5% threshold of votes across the country for Riigikogu elections is quite high. Source: http://www.estonica.org/en/Society/Development_of_the_Estonian_political_landscape_until_2006/Nature_of_the_electoral_system_and_basic_trends_in_voter_participation/ More information: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_political_parties_in_Estonia http://www.ipu.org/parline/reports/2105_B.htm

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The term is 4 years. Government formation follows parliamentarism, which means that usually the leader of the largest party in Parliamentary election becomes the new PM. All Finns over the age of eighteen by the year of an election are eligible to vote. Voting is not compulsory. The country is divided for national elections into thirteen electoral constituencies. Candidates for the Parliament (Eduskunta) are almost invariably nominated by political parties. Finland uses the d'Hondt constituency list system with only slight modifications. Under this system, elections are based on proportionality rather than on plurality, and seats are allotted to parties commensurately with the number of votes polled. Votes go to individual candidates. There is no electoral threshold.

Description of political parties listed above	1. CDU/CSU: Christian Democratic Union/Christian Social Union. The CDU is one of the main national parties, based on Christian values. The social market economy is the basic topic of CDU policy. The CSU is the Bavaria-based sister party of the CDU. 2. SPD: Social Democratic Party. The SPD is the second main national party. It was considered the working class party for a long time, today it calls itself a mainstream party striving for social justice. 3. Die Linke (the Left Party) is a cooperation between the PDS (Party of Democratic Socialism, former SED) and the WASG (Labour and Social Justice – The Electoral Alternative), which was founded in 2004 by former SPD-members and trade unionists and became a political party in 2005. In June 2007, the two parties merged into Die Linkspartei or Die Linke (The Left). 4. Bündnis 90/Die Grünen (the Green party). The Greens are a grassroots democratic party committed to promoting environmental issues, pacifism and equal rights for men/women, natives/immigrants etc. 5. FDP: Free Democratic Party. The FDP upholds the tradition of liberalism, believing in increasing citizens' responsibility and reducing the role of government. It has been part of the national government for most of West Germany's post war history. 6. AfD: The AfD ("Alternative für Deutschland") is a relatively new party, founded 2013, which originally focused almost solely on criticism of the European monetary system and the Euro. From then on the party evolved into a right-wing populist party which promotes anti-establishment orientations, criticizes the governments' asylum and immigration policies and supports traditional family values. Since the 2017 federal elections, the AfD is the third strongest party in the German Bundestag and the largest opposition party. 7. Piratenpartei (Pirate Party): The Pirate Party Germany was founded 2006 as part of the Pirate Parties International. The party mainly focuses on Web policies and promotes protection of data privacy and enhancement of transparent governance. It supports reforms of copyright, genetic patents and drug policy as well as unconditional basic income and direct democracy via e-democracy. 8. NPD: National Democratic Party. The right-wing extremist party covers nationalistic issues like the REPUBLIKANER party, but is even more extreme and is closer to the Neo-Nazi-milieu.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	No
Two or more votes registered:	Yes
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Basic Law guarantees the right to vote by secret ballot in direct and free elections to every German citizen eighteen years of age or older. To be eligible to vote, an individual must have resided in a constituency district for at least three months prior to an election. Officials who are popularly elected include Bundestag deputies at the federal level, Landtag representatives or senate members at the Land level, and council members at the district and local levels. Executive officials typically are not chosen in popular, direct elections; however, in a minority of municipalities the mayor is elected by popular vote. Elections usually are held every four years at the federal levels, and every five or four years in the 16 'Bundesländer' (federal states). Elections at the federal (Land) and local levels are not held simultaneously, as in the United States, but are rather staggered. As a result, electoral campaigns are almost always under way, and each election is viewed as a test of the federal government's popularity and the strength of the opposition. All elections are held on Sunday. Under the German electoral system, each voter casts two ballots in a Bundestag election. The elector's first vote is cast for a candidate running to represent a particular district. The candidate who receives a plurality of votes becomes the district representative. Germany is divided into 299 electoral districts with roughly 208,000 voters in each district. Half of the Bundestag members are directly elected from these districts. The second ballot is cast for a particular political party. These second votes determine each party's share of the popular vote. In the data file, variable prtvede1 (Party voted for in last national election 1, Germany) refers to the first vote (Erststimme). Variable prtvede2 (Party voted for in last national election 2, Germany) refers to the second vote "Zweitstimme".

Párbeszéd (Párbeszéd Magyarországért Párt) - Dialogue for Hungary - Joint list with MSZP 11. MKKP (Magyar Kétfarkú Kutya Párt) - Hungarian Two-tailed Dog Party - 1.8 %
Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The Democratic Coalition (Hungarian: Demokratikus Koalíció, DK) is a social-liberal political party in Hungary led by former Prime Minister Ferenc Gyurcsány. Founded in 2010 as a faction within the Socialist Party (MSZP), the Democratic Coalition split from the MSZP on 22 October 2011 and became a separate party. It has nine MPs in the National Assembly and four MEPs in the European Parliament. The party platform adopted elements of social liberalism and it is strongly pro-European. 2. Together (Hungarian: Együtt), officially Together – Party for a New Era (Hungarian: Együtt – A Korszakváltók Pártja), formerly also known as Together 2014 (Hungarian: Együtt 2014), was a social-liberal political party in Hungary formed on 26 October 2012 for the 2014 Hungarian parliamentary election by Gordon Bajnai, the former Prime Minister of Hungary, to contrast Viktor Orbán's government. Together was founded as a coalition of left-wing and liberal political movements and civil organizations that transformed itself into a party in March 2013. The party had formed an electoral alliance with the Dialogue for Hungary (PM) and they won together four seats in the national assembly and one seat in the European Parliament in 2014. The Together dissolved after its poor performance in the 2018 parliamentary election. 3. Founded in 1988 as a liberal youth party opposing the ruling communist government, Fidesz has come to dominate Hungarian politics on the national and local level since its landslide victory in the 2010 national elections on a joint list with the Christian Democratic People's Party, securing it a parliamentary supermajority that it retained in 2014 and again in 2018. Fidesz also enjoys majorities in the county legislatures (19 of 19), almost all (20 of 23) urban counties and in the Budapest city council. Viktor Orbán has been the leader of the party for most of its history. Fidesz is currently considered a national conservative party favoring interventionist policies on economic issues like handling of banks, and a strong conservativestance on social issues and European integration. Recently, the party has increasingly been described as far-right, and its ruling style has also been variously described as "soft fascism", "soft dictatorship", and "soft autocracy". The Fidesz party has denied such accusations and distanced itself from the extreme right; it has criticized such accusations as politically motivated opposition to its anti-immigrant policies and pursuit of "illiberal democracy". 4. Jobbik (Jobbik Magyarországért Mozgalom) is an extreme right wing party in the Hungarian political palette. It was formed in 2003 and became popular in second part of the 2000s by explicit and open xenophobic, militant, anti-Roma and anti-corruption discourse. It identifies itself with being "conservative and radically patriotic Christian party." They identify with the radical right ideology of the 1930s and 1940s. They voice a strong anti-EU opinion. They gained a stunningly high share of votes and have been on the rise for a few years, but lately they lost a great proportion of their supporters. Since 2014 Jobbik has started redesigning itself as a conservative people's party and changed the controversial elements of its communication. 5. The Christian Democratic People's Party (Hungarian: Kereszténydemokrata Néppárt, KDNP) is a political party in Hungary. It is officially a coalition partner of ruling party Fidesz, but in reality it is a satellite party of Fidesz and has been unable to get into the Parliament on its own since 1994 when it barely passed the election threshold of 5% of votes. Without Fidesz, its support cannot be measured. 6. LMP (Lehet Más A Politika): Politics could be Different (translation by the ESS team, as the party does not have an English homepage) was formed in 2009. According to its Funding Document is a liberal, center-left, community based party building also on conservative traditions. It has sustainability, ecology, social justice and community in its focus. It has always been a small party, about the threshold of 5% enabling it to enter the Parliament. It has gone through one major change; following an intensive debate whether to cooperate with the Socialist party in overthrowing the rule of FIDESZ on the 2014 parliamentary elections members of the party could not come to a consensus. On January 2013 approx. half of the members of the party have left the party and formed a new political party: Dialogue for Hungary. In the past elections LMP. 7. Hungarian Socialist Party was founded on 7 October 1989 by the reform wing of the ruling communist Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party. MSZP was one of the two major parties in Hungarian politics until 2010, however the party lost much of its popular support as a result of 2006 protests and 2008 economic crisis. Following the 2010 elections, MSZP became the largest opposition party in parliament, a position it held until 2018, when it was overtaken by Jobbik. 8. Munkáspárt (Magyar Kommunista Munkáspárt) - Hungarian Communist Party was formed after the transition in 1989 on the ashes of the former Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party (leading communist party). It is an extreme left wing but not radical party, identifying communist ideology. Ever since its formation it has not been able to pass the 5% threshold to enter the

	Parliaments. 9. Momentum Movement (Hungarian: Momentum Mozgalom) is a centrist Hungarian political party founded in March 2017. It came to national prominence as a political association in January 2017 after organizing a petition against the Budapest bid for the 2024 Summer Olympics, calling for a public referendum on the matter. The petition, which gathered over 266,000 signatures, was successful, but the government cancelled the Olympic bid before a referendum could have been held.[10] After its establishment as a political party, Momentum quickly built a national following, and presently has approximately 4,000 members. Momentum party candidates appeared on the ballot in most electoral districts in the 2018 Hungarian parliamentary election, promoting the replacement of the government of Viktor Orbán and advocating a new generation of political change in the country. The party failed to win any seats in parliament, but is now widely considered the strongest extra-parliamentary party in Hungary, and is often involved in the organization of political events and demonstrations. 10. Dialogue for Hungary (Hungarian: Párbeszéd Magyarországért, Párbeszéd) (also known in its shortened form Dialogue since September 2016), is a Hungarian green political party that was formed in February 2013 by eight MPs who left the Politics Can Be Different (LMP) party. 11. The Hungarian Two-tailed Dog Party (Hungarian: Magyar Kétfarkú Kutya Párt; MKKP) is a joke political party in Hungary. It was founded in Szeged in 2006, but registered as an official political party in 2014. The party's main activity is street art – graffiti, stencils and various posters – parodying the political elite.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	No
Two or more votes registered:	Yes
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Hungarian elections are regulated by the 2011/203 law. Elections have one round, but each voter gives two votes on the elections: one on a party list and one for the representative of the given electoral district (who may represent a party or be an independent candidate). The number of members of Parliament has been decreased from 386 to 199 in 2011 out of which 106 are representatives of a geographical district (direct election) and 93 are elected through party lists. The threshold for a party to enter the Parliament is 5 per cent on the party list. For party coalitions the threshold is 10 or 15 per cent depending on the number of parties participating in the coalition. Parliamentary elections are held every 4 years.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Anti-Austerity Alliance (AAA) –People Before Profit was a left-wing alliance formed for the 2016 general election. In 2017, AAA has changed its name to Solidarity; it was originally formed in 2014 by the Socialist party in Ireland to fight austerity measures such as water charges. The People Before Profit Alliance was formed in 2005 by the Socialist Workers Party and joined by the Community and Workers Action Group in 2007. 2. Fianna Fáil was founded by Eamonn de Valera in 1926, evolving out of the War of Independence and the anti-treaty side in the Civil War of the 1920s. It first came to power in 1932 and is the party that has held the longest period of office in Ireland. However, following the 2008 economic crash and crisis in the public finances that led to the EU-IMF bailout, as well as several political scandals, Fianna Fáil suffered significant electoral losses in the 2011 election. It moved from being the largest party to the third largest party in the State. After a recovery in the 2016 elections, Fianna Fáil is today the second largest party in Ireland. Since 2009, Fianna Fáil has been part of the European Liberal Democrat and Reform Party (ELDR) in the European Parliament. 3. Fine Gael was founded in 1933 following the amalgamation of a number groups: the pro-treaty Cumann na nGaedheal of W. T. Cosgrave, the Centre Party under Frank MacDermot, and the National Guard. It was also given a secondary name 'the United Ireland Party', as a result of which in its early years it was occasionally referred to in newspapers as 'UIP'. It is a member of the Christian Democratic European People's Party in the European Parliament. 4. The Green Party was founded on the principles that economic and social progress should not negatively impinge on the environment. It is a member of the European Green Party in the European Parliament. The Green Party originally formed in 1981 as the Ecology Party of Ireland, becoming the Green Alliance/Comhaontas Glas in 1983, and renaming itself the Green Party/Comhaontas Glas in 1986. 5. Independent comprise non-party candidates and are a diverse group. 6. Labour is a party aligned to social democratic principles. The party is a member of the Party of European Socialists in the European Parliament. The Labour Party was founded in 1912 by James Connolly, James Larkin and William O'Brien as the political wing of the Irish Trade Union Congress. It is the oldest political party in Ireland 7. Sinn Féin is an Irish republican (nationalist) and left-wing all-Ireland party, focused on the reunification of Ireland and the establishment of a democratic socialist republic. Sinn Féin traces its origins to the 1905 party founded by Arthur Griffith and Bulmer Hobson. It came to power in the first Dáil of 1919, led by Eamonn de Valera, but split after the Anglo-Irish Treaty in 1921. Due to its refusal to recognise the Republic of Ireland, its abstentionist policy regarding taking seats in the Dáil, and its association with the IRA, it had little support in the South of Ireland. It has increased its support since the 1980s and the peace process, emerging as the second largest party in the Northern Ireland Assembly and the fourth largest party in the Republic of Ireland. 8. Social-democrats was founded in 2015 by three independent members of Dáil Éireann, Stephen Donnelly, Catherine Murphy, and Róisín Shortall. According to the party's constitution, their first objective is to advocate for and support social democratic values and policies in communities throughout Ireland and the world. 9. The Socialist Party is a left-wing, anti-capitalist all-Ireland party. Previously called Militant and Militant Labour, it became the Socialist Party in 1997. The Socialist Party is affiliated to the Committee for a Workers' International (CWI) which brings together socialists in over 40 countries.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The electoral system of the national Parliament use a parallel voting system which act as a mixed system for the election of the 630 Chamber of Deputies' members and the 315 Senate of the Republic's ones. 37% of seats are allocated using a first-past-the-post voting while the other 63% are allocated using the proportional largest remainder method, with one round of voting.

Both at the Chamber of Deputies and at the Senate, organised political parties or groups may stand for elections as a single list or in a coalition. The coalition shall be the same at a national level, and the parties joining forces in a coalition shall present common candidates in single-member districts, (exception made for the lists representing recognised linguistic minorities, which may present their candidates separately). Both at the Chamber of Deputies and at the Senate, in every multi-member district, each roll is made up of a list of candidates, presented according to a numerical order.

As regards the Chamber of Deputies, the national territory is divided into 28 constituencies. Each constituency is divided into single-member districts, and in one or more multi-member districts, made up of the territorial aggregation of neighbouring single-member districts. The 232 single-member districts of the national territory are distributed in each constituency on the basis of the population. In each district, the candidate obtaining the highest number of votes is elected.

As regards the seats to be allocated to the lists and coalitions of lists in multi-member districts, the allocation is performed at a national level for the Chamber of Deputies, through a proportional method, among the coalitions of lists and the lists exceeding the election thresholds.

The threshold to access the allocation of seats is 3% of the votes validly cast at a national level for single lists, and 10% of the votes validly cast at a national level for coalitions, provided that at least one of the lists of the coalition obtained 3% of the votes validly cast at a national level (the threshold for inter-coalition lists is 3% of the votes validly cast at a national level, also in case the coalition does not reach the 10% threshold). As far as coalitions are concerned, the votes obtained by the lists not exceeding the threshold of 1% will not be taken into account.

As regards the Senate, the national territory is divided into 20 constituencies corresponding to the territory of each Region. Every regional constituency is divided into single-member districts and in one or more multi-member districts. The national territory is divided into 116 single-member districts. In each district, the candidate obtaining the highest number of votes is elected.

As regards the seats to be allocated to the lists and coalitions of lists in multi-member districts, the allocation is performed at a regional level for the Senate, through a proportional method, among the coalitions of lists and the lists exceeding the election thresholds. The threshold to allocate the seats is set – as it happens with the Chamber of Deputies – at 3% of the votes validly cast at a national level for individual lists, and 10% for coalitions, provided that at least one of the lists in the coalition obtains 3% of the votes validly cast nationally or 20% in a Region (the threshold for inter-coalition lists is in any case 3% of the votes validly cast at a national level or 20% of the valid votes in at least one Region, even in case the coalition does not reach the threshold of 10%). As far as coalitions are concerned, the votes obtained by the lists not exceeding the threshold of 1% will not be taken into account.

The allocation of regional seats to the Senate also involves the lists – either individual or in coalition – that obtained at least 20% of votes validly cast in at least one Region. Special provisions protect the lists representing recognised linguistic minorities standing for elections in a Special Autonomous Region whose statutes or relevant laws provide for particular protection of such minorities.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The Latvian Russian Union is an ethnic minority, left-wing political party in Latvia, supported by ethnic Russians and other Russian-speaking minorities. The co-chairpersons of the Latvian Russian Union are Miroslav Mitrofanov, Yuriy Petropavlovsky and Tatjana Zdanoka. Tatjana Zdanoka is also a member of European Parliament in the European Greens–European Free Alliance group. The party originated as the electoral alliance For Human Rights in a United Latvia in 1998. It is not represented in the Latvian parliament. The threshold in Latvia is 5%. 2. New Conservative Party is a right wing conservative political party in Latvia. The party was founded in 2014. The party was elected in the Latvian parliament in 2018 on a promise to fight corruption. It is one of coalition parties forming Latvian government. Janis Bordans is a founder and leader of the party. He is also a justice minister. Rule of law, small government, traditional understanding of a family, geopolitical orientation towards the West are the essence of the party programme. 3. Action Party is an anti-establishment political party. It was founded in 2008. Igors Melņikovs is its current leader. He was previously elected in the Latvian parliament from Harmony (a social democratic party). Its programme includes some points like stopping the flow of refugees into Latvia, establishing an European Army, developing a common taxation system in the EU. There are no reliable sources of information about the party and their members. It did not pass the electoral threshold. 4. National Alliance was formed as an electoral alliance for the 2010 parliament election bringing together political parties "For Fatherland and Freedom/LNNK" and "All for Latvia!". It became a unitary party in 2013. Raivis Dzintars is its current leader It is a coalition partner in the Latvian government. Two of its members are also represented in the European Parliament in the group of European Conservatives and Reformists. Political scientists in Latvia do not have a consensus whether National Alliance is a right wing or a far right party. The party opposes a refugee quota system and liberal immigration policies. It calls for a more closer European and transatlantic cooperation in the energy and military sectors. It supports more generous benefits for children and a parental leave. 5. The Progressives is a social democratic political party in Latvia. The party was founded in 2017. Its current leaders are Antoņina Ņenaševa and Edmunds Cepurītis. The Progressives are not represented in the Latvian parliament or European Parliament. The party advocates a progressive tax system, an active role of government in the economy, gender and LGBT rights. It also supports green policies – scrapping fuel subsidies, supporting municipalities and households to insulate housing, maintaining biodiversity, cutting the use of pesticides etc. It did not pass the electoral threshold. 6. Latvia's Centrist Party was founded in 2016. Aleksandra Siliniece, Aivars Silinieks un Andžejs Zdanovičs are its board members. The party is not represented in the parliament. Its programme includes the reintroduction of state monopoly in strategic sectors and the former Latvian currency (before the introduction of Euro), maintaining neutral relationships with Latvian neighbours, giving up the membership in NATO, and the popularization of traditional family, cultural and national values. It could be argued it is an anti-establishment party. 7. LSDSP/KDS/GKL is a broad coalition of three parties - Latvian Social Democratic Labour Party, Christian Democratic Union and a party "Honour to Serve Our Latvia". It was created before the parliamentary elections in 2018. Its programme advocates traditional Christian values, the protection of house ownership, strengthening labour rights and the role of trade unions. It stands for a greater state involvement in society and economy. Political scientists in Latvia identify the coalition as left-leaning on the ideological spectrum. It did not pass the electoral threshold. 8. The party "For Latvia from the Heart" was founded in 2014 by a former State Auditor and its current leader Inguna Sudraba. The party was represented in the Parliament from 2014 to 2018. However, it did not pass the electoral threshold in 2018. The party advocates "active statism", state responsibility for ensuring decent living standards, social and health care services. State should ensure social justice for all. Taxpayers should receive clear and transparent information about government spending and whether the proposed objectives have been reached. It can be identified as a left party. There is hardly any media coverage about its activities. The website of the party features news stories from May 2019.

9. The Social Democratic Party "Harmony" is a social-democratic political party in Latvia. The party was founded in 2010 as the merger of the National Harmony Party with New Centre and the Social Democratic Party. Its current leader is Janis Urbanovics. It is represented both in the Latvian parliament and European Parliament. MEP Nils Usakovs was a long serving mayor of the capital city Riga from 2009 to 2019. He joined Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats in the EP. In the Latvian parliament, Harmony advocates the rights of Russian speaking population. It also supports more government spending on social benefits and services. Harmony has never been a coalition partner in the Latvian government. Despite its electoral success in state and European elections, Harmony's influence in the parliament has been limited because many political opponents regard the party as pro-Russian.

10. Development/For! is a centre liberal political alliance in Latvia, made of three political parties: Movement For!, For Latvia's Development and Growth. The alliance was founded 2018. The alliance is led by its two co-chairmen: Daniels Pavljuts, member of the Latvian parliament and the leader of Movement For! and Juris Pūce, Minister for Environmental Protection and Regional Development and the leader of Latvian Development. The alliance is represented in the European Parliament. A former political scientist Ivars Ijabs joined the Renew Europe group in the EP. The alliance supports the increase of government spending in social and health care sectors. It seeks to triple funding for research. The alliance recently advocated the changes in legislation acts to grant Latvian citizenship to all stateless newborns in Latvia. It supports high skilled immigration from abroad.

11. The Latvian Association of Regions is a right political alliance in Latvia. It was founded in 2014. Its current leader is Edvards Smiltēns. It won 8 seats in the Latvian parliament at the 2014 parliamentary election but did not pass the threshold in the 2018 elections. The main focus of the alliance is uneven regional development in Latvia. It calls for an equal access to services in all regions, a more equal distribution of state funding in road maintenance, transport, education, and health care. It advocates the preservation of local identity and a greater government support for SMEs.

12. Latvian Nationalists is a broad coalition of small political parties and associations such as, "Heritage of the Fatherland", "Land of Māra", "Party of Latvia's Rebirth". Alfrēds Buls, Kārlis Krūmiņš, Roberts Purnis, Andris Rubins and Silvestrs Rubins are its current board members. The coalition was founded in 2018 just before the parliament election. It did not pass the electoral threshold. Its programme for the 2019 European Parliament elections states that Latvian national interests should be regarded above those of the EU. Nationality, family and faith should be included as core values in the Lisbon Treaty. The legalization of illegal immigrants must be stopped in the EU member states. There is a consensus among political scientists in Latvia that the coalition is on the far right of the ideological spectrum.

13. New Unity is an electoral party alliance founded in 2018 together with a centre right party Unity and regional parties such as the regional Kuldīga County Party, "For Valmiera and Vidzeme", "For Tukums City", the Jēkabpils Regional Party and the Latgale Party. New Unity is represented both in the Latvian Parliament and European Parliament. It joined the European People's Party in the EP. Its current leader Krisjānis Kariņš is also the Prime Minister of Latvia. New Unity supports further European integration but not tax harmonization, advocates fiscal discipline but also more equal distribution of incomes. It supports strengthening the role of the Latvian language in the education system but is liberal in its attitudes towards regulated and limited immigration.

14. For an Alternative was a coalition of small parties founded in 2018 before the parliamentary elections. The most notable members of the coalition are former MEP Aleksandrs Mirskis and former deputy in the Riga city council, Juris Žuravļovs. Its programme had a number of rather dubious policy proposals – the reintroduction of death penalty, even for economic crimes, all major decisions being made only in referendums, writing off Latvian foreign debt, no taxes for the agricultural sector etc. It is a left leaning populist party coalition. It did not pass the electoral threshold.

15. Who Owns the State is a populist, anti-establishment party in Latvia. It was founded by Artuss Kaimiņš, a deputy elected from The Latvian Association of Regions in the 2014 parliamentary elections. He is now a co-chair of the party. However, Artuss Kaimiņš was expelled from the parliamentary fraction by other party members in January 2020. His future in the party is unclear. The party is a coalition partner in the Latvian government. It has three ministers in the government. Its programme for the 2018 elections had some radical proposals such as decreasing the number of ministers down to six (the current number is 13), merging all state higher education institutions into one, establishing state control over all municipal schools and kindergartens, scrapping a real estate tax for the retired etc.

16. Union of Greens and Farmers is an agrarian-conservative political alliance that consists of two political parties: the Latvian Farmers' Union and the Latvian Green Party. It was founded in 2002. Edgars Tavars is its current leader. Since 2002, the union has passed the electoral threshold in all elections (six). It was a coalition partner in four Latvian governments. The union had nominated two prime ministers. After the 2018 election when political opponents gained more seats in the parliament, the union was left in the opposition. It was accused of close links to a mayor of Ventspils (city in Latvia) Aivars Lembergs who is charged with corruption, bribery, money laundering and abuse of elected office. The union has been advocating more government spending on pensions, a more equal development of Latvian regions. Latvia should be pragmatic advancing its interests in the EU. The union has conservative views on family and gender. The alliance has also green policy proposals to maintain biodiversity and clean environment.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:

Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No

Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Latvian parliament (Saeima) has 100 members. It is elected for a four-year term by proportional representation with a 5 % threshold. An unmodified Sainte-Laguë method is used to allocate seats. The parliamentary elections are held on the first Saturday of October. Latvia is divided into five separate constituencies and the number of seats available in each constituency is based upon the number of registered voters each one contains. In the 2018 elections, the distribution of the seats was as follows: Rīga (35 seats), Vidzeme (25 seats), Latgale (14 seats), Zemgale (14 seats) and Kurzeme (12 seats). Candidates for Saeima elections must be members of a registered political party or alliance of parties. Candidates have to be Latvian citizens (dual citizens are also eligible) aged 21 or over. All citizens of Latvia aged 18 and over are entitled to vote on the election day. They need to take their passports with them to vote and receive a special stamp in it to confirm that they have voted. Each voter is issued with a complete set of ballot papers containing all the candidates nominated for the constituency and a ballot envelope bearing the stamp of the relevant polling station commission. The voter chooses the party for which he or she wishes to vote. A voter may choose to put a "+" mark opposite the name of a candidate or candidates they particularly like on the party list and/or cross out the names of any candidates they don't like. This process effectively moves candidates "up" or "down" the party list although though it still only counts as one vote for one party. No party or party coalition has ever gained an absolute majority to be able to form a government on its own. The Latvian government (Cabinet of Ministers) is formed by a coalition of political parties or alliances. Coalition partners sign a coalition agreement, government declaration and government action plan. At this point they also agree on the distribution of ministerial portfolios. Afterwards President nominates a new prime minister. The prime minister (President of Ministers) introduces the parliament to the new cabinet. Then Saeima votes for the proposed cabinet. A simple majority is needed (usually 51 votes) to pass the motion.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Lithuanian Social Democratic Party (LSDP) is a major leftist (social democratic) party in Lithuania. It is one of the major parties in Lithuania. It lead the government coalitions (formed with different left leaning parties) from 2001 to 2008. It was founded in 2001 when former LSDP merged with ex-communist party (Lithuanian Democratic Labor Party). In 2008-2012 it was the biggest opposition party, and after winning the 2012 parliamentary elections formed the governing coalition with DP, TT and LLRA-KSS. However, it has since lost its popularity and won only 17 seats in the last elections. Nevertheless, it formed the governing coalition with LVZS. In the end of 2017, some MPs representing LSDP were forced to leave the party as they did not agree with the party position requiring to leave the governing coalition. 2. Homeland Union - Lithuanian Christian Democrats (TS-LKD) is a major rightist (conservative/Christian democratic) party in Lithuania. It is a successor party of the Independence Movement Sąjūdis and was formed in 1993. It has merged with different rightist parties (most notably, with the Lithuanian Union of Political Prisoners and Deportees in 2004 and with the Lithuanian Nationalist Union and Lithuanian Christian Democratic Party in 2008). However, different factions splintered from it, too (among them, Nationalist Faction in 2011). It lead the government (together with the Lithuanian Christian Democratic Party) in 1996-2000. After winning national elections in 2008 it has formed a coalition government with LRLS, National Resurrection Party (TPP) and LiCS (TPP merged with LiCS in 2011). After the 2012 and 2016 parliamentary elections it was one of the biggest fractions in the Seimas. 3. Lithuanian Freedom Union (Liberals) (LLSL) is a minor centrist (liberal/conservative) party. It was founded in 2014 as a merger between Political Party 'Union Yes' and Liberal and Centre Union. It is led by the previously long-term Vilnius mayor Arturas Zuokas. He used to be the leader of both Political Party 'Union Yes' and Liberal and Centre Union. 4. Party 'Young Lithuania' (JL) is a minor rightist (nationalist/conservative) party founded in 1994. It has been transforming and merging with different other nationalist/conservative parties till 2005 when the organizational structure has stabilized. It has some representation at the local level and its leader Stanislovas Buskevicius has been elected into the Seimas in 2000 and 2004. In 2016 parliamentary elections it formed electoral coalition with the Nationalist Union 'Coalition of S. Buškevičius and the Nationalists Against Corruption and Poverty'. 5. Party Order and Justice (TT) is a major rightist (nationalist/conservative) Lithuanian party. It was founded in 2002 by now controversial former President Rolandas Paksas (removed from office after the impeachment in 2004) as a splinter from the Lithuanian Liberal Union. At first, it was named Liberal Democratic Party and in 2006 the name was changed into the current one. Most of the time it spent in the opposition, however, after the 2012 parliamentary elections it was included into the governing coalition (with LSDP, DP and LLRA). After the 2016 parliamentary elections it again moved into the opposition. In 2018 this party joined governing coalition. 6. Lithuanian Peasant and Greens Union (LVZS) is an agrarian (leftist/green) party, having its origins in the interwar period. It was re-established in 2005 when the former merger (founded in 2001) of Lithuanian Peasants Party and New Democracy Party decided to change its name into the historic one. Lead by a prominent politician, former Prime Minister Kazimira Danute Prunskiene, it has been participating in government coalitions with LSDP in 2004-2008. However, in the 2008 Seimas elections it has suffered a major defeat and got only 3 seats. Eventually, after Prunskiene left the party in 2009 it has been renamed (in 2012) into the Lithuanian Peasant and Greens Union. It was not very successful in the parliamentary elections of 2012. However, it won majority of seats (54) in the Seimas in the parliamentary elections 2016. Currently, it is headed by Ramunas Karbauskis who was elected to the parliament in 2016. However, it delegated Saulius Skvernelis (another popular leader of the party) to the post of the Prime Minister. 7. Liberals' Movement of the Republic of Lithuania (LRLS) is one of the major centrist (liberal) parties, founded as a splinter from LiCS in 2006. After the 2008 Seimas elections it has formed the government coalition with TS-LKD, National Resurrection Party and Liberal and Centre

Union. After the 2012 and 2016 parliamentary elections it is one of the two biggest opposition parties in the Seimas. Before the parliamentary elections of 2016 its leader Eligijus Masiulis has got into a bribery scandal. Ever since the party has been in the process of changing its leadership and renewal.

8. Labour Party (DP) used to be one of the major centrist (liberal) Lithuanian parties founded in 2003 by the Russian-born millionaire Viktor Uspaskich. It has participated in government coalitions with LSDP in 2004-2008 and after the 2008 Seimas elections it has moved into the opposition. In 2011 it merged with the New Union (Social Liberals) and in 2013 it merged with the Christians' Party. After the 2012 parliamentary elections it again formed the governing coalition with LSDP, TT and LLRA-LSS. Importantly, some leaders (present and former) of this party were found guilty for bookkeeping fraud by the first instance court in 2013. The case is still being litigated in courts. In the Seimas elections of 2016 it failed to reach electoral threshold (5%) and only some of its candidates won seats in single-member districts.

9. Political Party 'The Way of Courage' (DK) is a populist (single issue) party. It was founded in 2012 and has an anti-corruption and anti-neoliberal (in economics) platform. The party was established by supporters of Drasius Kedys, who claimed that justice officials had whitewashed a ring of paedophiles after his daughter had been sexually molested. Kedys died under unclear circumstances in 2010. The party's name alludes to Kedys' first name Drasius which means "the brave".

10. Lithuanian People's Party (LLP) is a minor party without clear ideological orientation. It was founded in 2009 and was led by Kazimira Danute Prunskiene, the first Prime Minister after Lithuania restored its independence in 1990. Due to illness she has left the leadership post in 2014. The party has some representation only at the municipal level.

11. Electoral Action of Poles in Lithuania-Christian Families Alliance (LLRA-KSS) is an ethnic minority (rightist/conservative) party. It was founded in 1994 when, following the new legislation on parties, Lithuanian Union of Poles (in order to be able to participate in elections as a party) transformed into political organization Electoral Action of Poles in Lithuania. Before 2012 it used to be a regional party having several MPs and MEPs. However, in the 2012 parliamentary elections its candidate list (which was joined by separate candidates from the Alliance of Russians in Lithuania, minor regional ethnic party) won enough votes to enter the parliament via the multi-member district. After this electoral success it was included into the governing coalition of LSDP, TT and DP. However, after some disagreements with other governmental parties it left the governing coalition in 2014. Before the 2016 parliamentary elections the party changed its name into the current one. Currently, the party is in the opposition. Its leader Waldemar Tomaszewski is very actively fighting for the rights of Poles in Lithuania and is also well known by some rather controversial political claims. In 2019 this party joined governing coalition.

12. Lithuanian Greens Party (LZP) is a minor green party established in 2011 by the name Political Party 'Lithuanian Green Movement'. In 2012 (after the Seimas elections) it was reorganised into the Lithuanian Green Party and is led by the former political advisor to the President Dalia Grybauskaitė, Mr. Linas Balsys. Even though its leader was elected into the Seimas in 2016 the party still does not have significant support from the electorate.

13. Political Party 'List of Lithuania' (LS) is a minor (mostly single issue – fighting corruption) political party. It was founded in 2012 by some prominent civil society leaders in order to transform Lithuania into 'non-oligarchic and decentralized state'. Even though one of its leaders Austra Maldeikiene was elected into the Seimas in 2016 the party still does not have significant support from the electorate.

14. Lithuanian Centre Party (LCP) is a minor rightist (nationalist/conservative) party. It was established in 1993 as Lithuanian Centre Union. It used to be an important party having about 20 seats in the Seimas and supporting the government in 1996-2000. After the electoral defeat in 2000 and eventual merger with the Lithuanian Liberal Union in 2003, some members formed a splinter party National Centre Party, which was renamed into the Lithuanian Centre Party in 2005. The party has since had some representation at the municipality level. In 2016 parliamentary elections it formed electoral coalition with the Lithuanian Pensioners' Party 'Anti-corruption Coalition of K. Krivickas and N. Puteikis'. Its leader Naglis Puteikis was elected into the Seimas in 2016.

15. Lithuanian Pensioners' Party (LPP) is a minor populist (single issue) party. It was founded in 2007 in order to represent 'interest of pensioners', however, did not receive any significant support from the electorate. In 2016 parliamentary elections it formed electoral coalition with the Lithuanian Centre Party 'Anti-corruption Coalition of K. Krivickas and N. Puteikis'. The Seimas elections of 2016 the coalition failed short only a few votes in order to overcome the electoral threshold (7%) in the multi-member electoral district.

16. Nationalist Union (TS) is currently a minor nationalist party, however, with a long and rich history. Originally, it was founded in 1924 and after the authoritarian coup in 1926 its member Antanas Smetona became the President of Lithuania for the rest of independence period (till 1940). In 1940 it was banned by the Soviet regime. In 1989 it was re-established, however, did not receive major support. It had several MPs in the Seimas before 2000 and some representatives at the municipal level (its members were elected as mayors in a couple of municipalities). In 2008 it merged into the TS-LKD and had several MPs, however, in 2011 it again splintered and re-established as an independent party. In 2016 parliamentary elections it formed electoral coalition with the Party 'Young Lithuania' 'Coalition of S. Buškevičius and the Nationalists Against Corruption and Poverty'.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:

Only one single vote registered:	No
Two or more votes registered:	Yes

Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The only national level legislative assembly in Lithuania is the Seimas (the President is also elected by the popular vote). It is elected for 4 years term and consists of 141 members. In the elections of the Seimas, voters cast two votes in the 1st round of the elections: one in 71 single-member constituencies for a candidate (person) and one in a multi-member (70 seats) nationwide constituency for a candidate list (party or coalition). Voters are allowed to freely rank candidates in the list (cast 5 preferential votes), however, if the preference is not stated, the first five candidates on the list receive preferential votes. 2nd round is held in a single-member constituency if none of the candidates receives majority of votes (50%+1 of votes from total votes cast if turnout > 40% OR 20% of votes from the registered voters if turnout < 40%). Votes in a multi-member constituency are allocated on the basis of the simple quotient and greatest remainders rules (Hare quota). There are two thresholds of eligibility for seat distribution in a multi-member constituency: a) 5% of total votes for party lists and b) 7% of total votes for joint multi-party electoral lists. Voting is not compulsory. Voting age: 18 years. In data file, party variables refer to the different votes as follows: PRTVBLT1: Multi-member nationwide constituency for candidate list (party or coalition), 1. round PRTVBLT2: Single-member constituency candidate vote (party affiliation), 1. round PRTVBLT3: Single-member constituency candidate vote (party affiliation), 2. round

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. VVD is a rightist-liberal party with progressive standpoints (favouring entrepreneurship and economic values). VVD was founded in 1948 and since 31 May 2006 it has been led by Mr. Rutte (currently the Prime Minister of the VVD/D66/CDA/CU cabinet). In the 2012 Dutch general elections, VVD forms a coalition cabinet with the PvdA. Between 2010 and 2012 it formed a coalition cabinet with the CDA, with parliamentary support from the PVV. 2. PvdA is a leftist social democratic party, led by Mr. Asscher since 2016. It was founded in 1946 and is now in the opposition again after a cabinet with VVD until 2017. 3. PVV is a conservative-liberal party led by Geert Wilders (former of the VVD). PVV was founded in 2006 and it has strong stances on Islam and immigration. The party is considered being populist, conservative, liberal, and leftist at the same time. Between 2010 and 2012 it supported the VVD-CDA cabinet. Currently it is in opposition. 4. SP is a Leftist (socialist) party led by Mr. Roemer since 2010. The party was founded in 1971. It gained its first parliamentary seats in 1994, and grew to 16.6% in 2006. But declined to 9.7% in 2012 and 9.1% in 2017. After the election Mrs. Lilian Marijnissen (daughter of one of the earlier party leaders Jan Marijnissen) took over the party. 5. CDA is a Christian democratic party at the centre of the Dutch political centrum. Since 2012, Mr. Van Haersma Buma is the political leader of the party. It was founded in 1980 after a fusion of several smaller Christian parties. Currently it is in cabinet after 4 years of opposition. 6. D66 is a centre (social-liberal) party with many progressive standpoints. It is considered left wing on immigration, and right wing on economic issues. Since 2006 it has been led by Mr. Pechtold. In recent years, D66 often forms a coalition with GreenLeft. In 2010 it supported a budget agreement together with GL, CU, and the VVD-CDA coalition cabinet, after that cabinet collapsed following the PVV's withdrawal of parliamentary support. They are currently in cabinet with the VVD/CDA and CU. Pechtold left in October 2018 and is replaced by Mr. Jetten. 7. Christen Unie is a Christian (Protestant) democratic party led by Mr. Segers from 2015. CU has conservative stances on abortion, euthanasia and gay marriage. For other issues, the party is considered centre-left. 8. Groen links is a Leftist party with green environmentalist ideals, led by Mr. Klaver since 2015. It was founded in 1990, after a fusion of several smaller leftist parties. 9. SGP is an orthodox Protestant party with conservative standpoints. The party was founded in 1918 and is led by Mr. Van der Staaij. Only as of 2006, women have been allowed to become members of this party. Only in 2013 party regulations formally allow passive voting rights for women following a court order. 10. Partij voor de Dieren is an animal rights party with natural affinity for environmental issues (center-left). The party is led by Ms. Marianne Thieme. 11. 50PLUS is a special interest party for the elderly. It was founded in 2014 and is led by Mr. Krol. 12. DENK is a migrant political party which has been formed by two former PvdA members. They remained in parliament after their first election in 2017. It is led by Mr. Kuzu. 13. Forum voor Democratie is founded in 2016 and led by Mr. Thierry Baudet. It is a populist conservative anti-immigrant right-wing party. 14. Bij1 was formerly known as Artikel1 is a Dutch political party founded in 2016 by Sylvana Simons. She was first part of DENK but close to the elections she started her own party. The standpoint of the party is to promote radical equality and economic fairness. The name Artikel1 refers to the first amendment in the constitution.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes

Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Dutch House of Representatives is composed of 150 seats which are elected by proportional representation in a single nation-wide constituency. One full seat is 0.67% of votes and residual seats are assigned with the D'Hondt method. This means that there is no electoral threshold except for gaining enough votes for one seat. The House of Representatives has a term of four years, although new elections might be held when the cabinet falls. Based on the election results the largest party often takes the initiative to form a coalition cabinet.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The Red Party is a far-left political party and the leading party to the left of the Socialist Left and the Labour Party in Norway. Since 2007 the party has sought a seat in parliament. The party was founded in March, 2007 by a merger of the Workers' Communist Party and the Red Electoral Alliance 2. Socialist Left Party: Formed in 1975 by a radical break-away group from Labour, opposed to Norwegian membership in NATO and the EU. In 2005 the party became a governing party for the first time, participating in the Red-Green Coalition with the Labour and the Centre Party. 3. Norwegian Labour Party is a social-democratic party with a hegemonic hold on government in post-war years. It is the senior partner in the current Norwegian government as part of the Red-Green Coalition, and its leader, Jens Stoltenberg, was the previous Prime Minister of Norway 4. The Liberal Party is a liberal political party and the the oldest in the country (formed in 1884). It has enacted reforms such as parliamentarism, freedom of religion, universal suffrage and free education. Having initially been a major party in Norway, it has in recent times become marginalized, and has struggled to get above the election threshold. 5. Christian Democratic Party was established in 1933 with the aim to uphold conservative moral and values. Centre-right party which has had a "king maker" position in Norwegian politics during the last decades. Due largely to their poor showing in the 2009 elections, the party has seen a conflict between its conservative and liberal wings over which direction their political ideology should shift in the future. 6. Centre Party: Agrarian party established in 1920. Have participated in centre-right coalitions in the post-war era and in centre-left coalitions in the 1930s. From its founding until 2000, the party had joined only non-socialist governments, but in 2005 changed allegiance and joined the Red-Green government. The party is firmly against Norwegian membership in the EU. 7. Conservative Party: Established in 1884 as the erstwhile bourgeois opposition party to Liberals. However, the party has historically included both conservatives and liberals. Until the 2005 elections the Conservatives were the main non-socialist opposition party. In 2005, the party achieved a very weak election result, but has seen a strong surge in polls since the 2009 election. The conservative Party currently holds the Prime Minister position (Erna Solberg) in Norway. 8. Progress Party: Originally formed as a one-man populist opposition party in 1973, largely as an anti-tax movement. Developed into a right-liberal party, but after a break-away and ideological schism in 1993, the party has consolidated itself as a right-populist party. 9. Coastal Party was established in 1999 and has attracted defectors primarily from Centre Party and Christian Democratic Party. Occupied one seat in parliament in two successive periods (1997-2001 and 2001-2005). The party has district, fishing and coastal issues among its primary policies and is a staunch opponent of Norwegian EU membership. 10. Green Party was formed in 1988 from a number of local environmental election lists. The party has no members of parliament, but has some representation in municipality councils. The party does not have a leader in the traditional sense - it is led by the national board which consists of five persons.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for	The primary legislative assembly at the national level in Norway is called the Storting. There are

this assembly:	169 seats or members of the Storting and general elections are held every four years for each of those seats. The Storting can not be dissolved and there is no opportunity to call for new elections outside the general election year. Every Norwegian citizen aged 18 or older by the end of the election year has the right to vote at the election. Norway practices universal suffrage. Everyone who is entitled to vote and who has lived in Norway for the last 10 years is eligible to be voted into the Storting with the exception of civil servants and people working in the Foreign Service. The Norwegian electoral system is based on the principle of direct election and proportional representation, and voting is by secret ballot. The ballot is a vote for a list of representatives from a political party and the names on the party list are candidates representing that particular party. These candidates have been chosen on the nomination conventions of each party, and the list is closed, i.e. voters are not permitted to rank candidates on the list. There are 19 counties in Norway which constitute the constituencies. These are divided into polling districts where the voters come to take ballot. 150 constituency representatives are elected to the legislative assembly - the Storting. Another 19 are distributed among the counties after the election. The allocation of seats is derived through a modified Sainte Laguë method

Wolność - Wolnosc (na)
Description of political parties listed above	1. KORWiN – (see also “Wolność” below)– a radically conservative liberal and Eurosceptic political party established in 2015 by Janusz Korwin-Mikke, following his removal from his former party, Kongres Nowej Prawicy [Congress of the New Right]. The party promotes the idea to eliminate income taxes and constrain the role of the state in the economy. Until 8 October 2016, the party was known as Koalicja Odnowy Rzeczypospolitej Wolność i Nadzieja [Coalition for the Renewal of the Polish Republic – Liberty and Hope]. The party's Polish name was originally an acronym identical with the founder's surname (KORWiN). In the 2015 parliamentary elections, KORWiN received 4.8% of the vote, falling below the 5% threshold and winning no seats in the parliament. In 2016, the party attempted to change its name into "Wolność", but due to problems with name registration, it restored its previous name in December 2018. This issue is important because in the ESS 9 questionnaire this party is listed as “Wolność” in question PRTCLPL. 2. Kukiz'15 is a right-wing political party in Poland led by a former rock musician Paweł Kukiz. In terms of the economy, the party favours liberal solutions, such as the reduction or even abolishing income taxes. Kukiz'15 criticises politicians for representing the interests of their respective political parties rather than the citizens who elected them, and criticises the current electoral system for benefiting large parties. Kukiz'15 promotes the idea of single-seat constituencies (which, according to its leader, will reduce the role of political parties), and more opportunities for the citizens to express their views via referendums. This grouping opposes excessive EU integration, and criticises many EU regulations (the climate & energy package or the refugee policy). The movement was founded after the 2015 presidential elections, when Paweł Kukiz ran as a candidate, and has been particularly popular among young people. In the 2015 parliamentary elections, Kukiz'15 won some parliamentary seats. Its electoral lists included many members of other groupings, also nationalist ones, who were subsequently excluded from the parliamentary caucus. According to opinion polls, this party enjoys a support of approx. 5–10%. Kukiz'15 has criticised some decisions by the ruling PiS, but has been more inclined than other parliamentary opposition to support the government, and was criticised for this favourable stance. Kukiz'15 does not exclude the possibility of a future coalition with PiS. The leader of Kukiz'15 is often criticised for crude language and controversial posts in social media. 3. Nowoczesna [Modern Poland] is a classic liberal political party, both in terms of the economy and worldview. It promotes the idea of tax reductions and solutions to help entrepreneurs. The party postulates a neutral state and has decidedly criticised the attempts by PiS to tighten the current abortion law. The party favours further integration with the EU. The party was founded in May 2015 by economist Ryszard Petru, and joined the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe (ALDE). In the 2015 parliamentary elections, Nowoczesna received 7.6% of the vote. Initially, the grouping scored high in opinion polls (above 20%), but its support began to dwindle over time. In 2017, leadership was assumed by Katarzyna Lubnauer. In subsequent months, many politicians left the party (including its founder Ryszard Petru) and its popularity in the polls began to drop under 5% (which is the electoral threshold for political parties in Poland). Nowoczesna is a very active opposition party, critical of the PiS government, along similar lines as PO. To a large extent, Nowoczesna competes with PO for the same electorate. In 2018, PO and Nowoczesna launched co-operation by forming a coalition – Koalicja Obywatelska [Civic Coalition]. 4. Platforma Obywatelska Rzeczypospolitej Polskiej (PO) [the Civic Platform of the Republic of Poland] – the largest opposition party with a centre-right orientation. Since 2005, PO has mainly competed for power with PiS [Law and Justice] (PiS; see above). Initially, PO proclaimed liberal economic slogans, but subsequently began to introduce socially-oriented promises into its programme. The party initially favoured tax reductions and opposed the idea of adopting a central budget with a deficit. However, after coming to power, it withdrew from these ideas. PO raised the retirement age to 67. In its joint government with PSL (see below), it also extended maternity leave from 26 weeks to 12 months. Despite its criticism of the socially-oriented policy of the current PiS government, which it sees as a threat to the central budget, PO declares that it will maintain some of the existing welfare solutions, including the ‘500 plus’ programme (see above). As far as worldview is concerned, PO holds more liberal views than PiS: it is in favour of government financing of in vitro fertilisation, it is against tightening the abortion law, and favours the current legal solutions, allowing abortion only in specific cases. On the other hand, PO has been criticised by left-wing parties for not introducing any significant liberalisations into

the law during its time in power (2007–2015). For example, PO failed to adopt any laws to legalise civil unions. PO has also criticised PiS for its excessive financial support for the Roman Catholic church in Poland. However, PO's position on many issues is difficult to identify clearly. Its members include many left- and right-wing politicians. PO highlighted its effective spending of EU funds on infrastructure development, including contracts for the construction of approx. 400 km of motorways and 360 km of expressways. PO stresses the need for stronger integration with the EU and wants to initiate a discussion on the adoption of the euro by Poland. PO is a member of the European People's Party (EPP).

PO was founded in 2001. It headed the government cabinet in 2007–2015, in a coalition with PSL [Polish Peasants' Party]. Until 2014, the Prime Minister was Donald Tusk from PO. In 2014, he stepped down to assume the post of President of the European Council (re-elected in 2017, with strong opposition from PiS). In 2015, PO lost the national elections and became the major opposition grouping. Since 2016, PO has been led by Grzegorz Schetyna, who has been trying to build a coalition to remove PiS from power. The first opportunity to do so was during the 2018 local government elections, when PO formed a coalition with Nowoczesna [Modern Poland] (see below). In connection with the European elections in May 2019, the European Coalition [Koalicja Europejska] was formed, including PO and Nowoczesna, as well as PSL, SLD and Partia Zieloni [Green Party]. The decision to establish the coalition was not made until February 2019, but the media had speculated about this possibility during the ESS 9 fieldwork; see below.

During its time in power, PO was criticised for its reforms (e.g. raising the retirement age, introducing changes in the education system) without any wide-ranging public consultations. PO was also criticised for introducing changes in private retirement plans in order to improve the situation of the central budget in the short term. On the other hand, PO was criticised for having no welfare-oriented programmes and the failure to take energetic steps in many areas, e.g. improving the collectability of VAT. Moreover, it is pointed out that PO has focused on criticising the ruling party, PiS, without proposing any economic ideas of its own.

Polskie Stronnictwo Ludowe (PSL) [Polish Peasants' Party] – an agrarian centre-right party with a traditional outlook. Initially, the party was sceptical about the EU integration but it has become more positive about the benefits of Poland's EU membership over time. Its programme contains strong socially oriented elements, such as the idea of financial support for the elderly and families in a difficult financial situation (e.g. when its leader, Władysław Kosiniak-Kamysz, was a labour minister in the PO-headed cabinet (see above), he introduced a law which provided financial support to people without the right to a maternity or paternity leave, in an amount of PLN 1000 (approx. EUR 240) per month for 12 months after childbirth). Relative to other parties, PSL places the greatest emphasis on representing the interests of farmers (e.g. families earning their living from agriculture can use a more advantageous social security system). PSL also supports the development of renewable energy sources. Importantly, PSL has been present in all successive Polish parliaments since 1989. This party formed a ruling coalition with the post-communist Sojusz Lewicy Demokratycznej (SLD) [Democratic Left Alliance, see above] in 1993–1997 and in 2001–2005. In 2007–2015, PSL formed a ruling coalition with PO. In the 2015 parliamentary elections, PSL received just over 5% of the vote.

PSL group criticises the ruling PiS party, competing for countryside voters with it. In connection with the 2019 European elections, PSL joined a broad European Coalition [Koalicja Europejska], whose main aim is to remove PiS from power (the decision to establish the coalition was not made until February 2019, but the media had speculated about this possibility during the ESS 9 fieldwork).

Prawo i Sprawiedliwość (PiS) [Law and Justice] – the ruling party with a strong right-wing orientation. One of the two largest political parties in Poland. Since 2005, it has been competing for power mainly with the Civic Platform (PO; see below). The nation and patriotic values are the fundamental elements of this party's ideology. The party has a conservative stance on issues such as abortion, in-vitro fertilisation (IVF), rights of the LGBT community, or the role of the Catholic Church in public life (as a result, the Catholic Church in Poland strongly backs up PiS). The party promotes welfare-oriented ideas. Among others, it has introduced the so-called '500 plus' programme, consisting in a monthly cash benefit of PLN 500 (approx. EUR 120) for the second and each subsequent child in the family. The party has also reversed the unpopular pension reform introduced earlier by the PO, which had raised the retirement age to 67 years. On the other hand, after coming to power, PiS did not introduce any changes that would clearly increase taxes for the highest earners. PiS is a Eurosceptic party. It is a member of the Alliance of European Conservatives and Reformists (ACRE), a European political party. PiS attaches great importance to closer relations with the USA.

PiS was founded in 2001 by brothers Jarosław and Lech Kaczyński (the latter subsequently became the president of Poland in 2005–2010, and died in an air crash at Smolensk-North airport in Russia). The party often stresses the importance of dealing with the communist past and has a declared focus on fighting corruption. It was the leading party in the government in 2005–2007. After the 2007 elections, and until today, PiS has been the key rival to PO, which ruled the country until 2015. After the parliamentary elections in 2015, PiS has held a majority in the Sejm and Senate. In the 2015 elections, PiS was running in the same electoral committee with two smaller parties: Polska Razem [Poland Together] and Solidarna Polska [Solidarity Poland]. Politicians from the two parties have performed important roles in the PiS-led cabinet.

PiS has been criticised for a number of changes it introduced after coming to power, primarily for its judicial reforms which, according to the opposition, violated the constitution. PiS has earned criticism for these steps also in the European Union. In addition, PiS has been criticised for its changes in the public mass media, which, according to the opposition, strongly favour the ruling party. Attempts to tighten the abortion law in 2016 and 2018 triggered social protests, and PiS withdrew from the idea to implement those reforms afterwards. PiS has been also criticised for its reforms in education and foreign policy. According to its opponents, the foreign policy of the PiS-led government has undermined Poland's position in the EU. PiS supports the idea for hard coal to remain the main source of energy, which has triggered criticism from environmental activists. PiS supports Polish coal mines even if they are not profitable.

	PiS is the party of origin for the current President of Poland, Andrzej Duda, who won the presidential elections in 2015. 7. Partia Razem [Together Party] is an opposition party formed in May 2015, with a strong left-wing orientation. The party highlights the need to introduce welfare-oriented solutions, higher taxes for higher earners and observance of workers' rights. In terms of worldview, the party stresses the need for a secular state and liberalisation of the abortion legislation. In the 2015 parliamentary elections, Razem received 3.6% of the vote, falling below the 5% threshold and winning no seats in the parliament. As a result, Razem has been primarily active in various political protests and activities outside the parliament. Unlike other political parties in Poland, Razem has a collective leadership. The party has criticised the current PiS government for violating the constitution and expressed criticism about the PO-led government in 2007–2015. Razem has also been highly critical of the economic reforms introduced by the first non-communist government after 1989. The party has been criticized for its inability and unwillingness to join electoral alliances with other leftist parties, notably SLD. At present, the party has very weak support in opinion polls. Please note: The left-wing Partia Razem [Together Party] is not to be confused with Polska Razem [Poland Together], which is a different grouping with a right-wing orientation. See comments to PiS and NTS ESS7 for further explanations. 8. Zjednoczona Lewica [United Left]. In July 2015, Sojusz Lewicy Demokratycznej (SLD) [Democratic Left Alliance] along with Twój Ruch [Your Movement], Unia Pracy [Labour Union], Polska Partia Socjalistyczna [Polish Socialist Party, POINTS], and Partia Zieloni [Green Party] formed an electoral alliance called 'United Left'. SLD is described below. In the 2015 parliamentary elections, the alliance received 7.6% of the vote. Since they were a coalition, and the threshold for coalitions in the parliamentary elections is 8%, they did not win any seats in the parliament. The coalition was dissolved in 2016. 9. Sojusz Lewicy Demokratycznej (SLD) [Democratic Left Alliance] – a left-wing party which favours a progressive tax system, equal access to health care and education for all citizens, separation of the Church and the state, equal rights for women and men, and legalisation of civil unions, strongly criticising the attempts by PiS to tighten the abortion law. SLD also supports the idea to strengthen the position of labour unions. However, it is worth stressing that SLD was criticised by other left-wing groupings and parties for not following a left-wing economic agenda sufficiently during its time in power in 1993–1997 and 2001–2005. Moreover, it implemented only limited measures towards a secular state. SLD supports the EU integration. Many politicians from other parties point out that the highest proportion of SLD activists originate from Socjaldemokracja Rzeczypospolitej Polskiej (SdRP) [Social Democracy of the Republic of Poland], a descendant of the former communist party Polska Zjednoczona Partia Robotnicza (PZPR) [Polish United Workers' Party], disbanded in 1989. SLD formed a government in 1993–1997 and 2001–2005 in a coalition with PSL (see below). In 2005, as a result of corruption scandals, SLD lost the vast majority of its electorate. Since that time, the party has not managed to regain any broad support. In 2015, SLD formed a coalition called Zjednoczona Lewica [United Left], which received 7.6% of the vote, below the mandatory 8% threshold for coalitions, thus winning no seats in the parliament (electoral alliances must gather at least 8% of the vote, while the threshold for individual parties is 5%). SLD has criticised both the ruling PiS and the PO government in 2007–2015. Shortly before the 2019 European elections, SLD joined a broad European Coalition [Koalicja Europejska], whose main aim is to remove PiS from power (the decision to establish the coalition was not made until February 2019, but the media had speculated about this possibility during the ESS 9 fieldwork; see below). 10. Wolność – a new name of the KORWIN party (see above), adopted in 2016. Due to problems with name registration, the party restored its previous name in December 2018. This issue is important because in the ESS 9 questionnaire this party is listed as "Wolność" in question PRTCLPL.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	In the voting to the Sejm (the primary legislative assembly) only one vote per voter is recorded. Each voter (a Polish citizen who is 18 years or older on the election day) may select one candidate for the assembly. This vote is cast for a candidate and, at the same time, for the election committee (a party or a coalition) which has nominated this candidate. A total of 460 members of parliament are elected in the Sejm elections. The elections are organised in constituencies. In 2015 the number of constituencies was 41. The number of mandates

	allocated to each constituency is expressed by a single-digit number or a double-digit number below 20. Parties which receive at least five per cent of votes (the so-called 'electoral threshold') and coalitions which receive at least 8 per cent of votes at the country level participate in the allocation of seats (this requirement does not apply to national minorities). The number of seats for parties and coalitions in each constituency is calculated according to the d'Hondt method. The groupings which have successfully placed their representatives in the Sejm (as well as those which failed to do so but have achieved at least 3 per cent of votes across Poland) receive funding from the central budget. The sums received depend on the performance at the elections, i.e. the highest level of funding goes to the groupings which have the largest numbers of MPs. This financial solution is often mentioned as a barrier for new groupings to play a considerable political role, for instance by getting elected to the parliament.

Description of political parties listed above	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Left Block is a left wing party established in 1999 through the fusion of the three other parties: União Democrática Popular (Popular Democratic Union), Partido Socialista Revolucionário (Revolutionary Socialist Party) and Política XXI (XXI Politics). Other small political groups and trends also join the party. It adopts a wide range of left wing policies. 2. United for the people is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. It was founded Santa Cruz, in the Autonomous Region of Madeira. Its founding principles are Unity, Transparency and Resistance and was legalized by the Constitutional Court on January 27, 2015. 3. FREE is a left-liberal political party which resulted from the gathering of some dissatisfied left-wing individuals who, for the most part, had until then been either militants or supporters of one of the various Portuguese leftist parties. Ideologically it can be described as a subscriber of the progressive ideas of the New Left of the 1960s and 1970s. It is viscerally against communism and is primarily devoted to such issues as social fairness, income redistribution, multiculturalism, gay rights, gender equality, abortion and environmental protection. 4. The Earth Party is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. was founded on August 12, 1993. Portuguese political party, environmentalist and humanist, standing at the center of the Portuguese political spectrum. 5. US,Citizens is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. Defends a new social democracy. Its inclusion in the register of Portuguese political parties was accepted by the Constitutional Court on June 23, 2015. It claims to be a Social Democrat in the classical terms. 6. PAN is a post-materialist party that strongly rejects anthropocentrism and speciesism and is mainly concerned with the attainment of an "ecological harmony" between people, animals and nature, as its name suggests. It is therefore an ecology party particularly focused on animal welfare and animal rights. Ideologically this party presents itself as a centrist party, as far as possible above the left-right divide. Among other things it proposes the suppression of entertainments that use violence towards animals, such as bullfighting; the amendment of the Constitution in order to consecrate the animal rights to life and well-being; and the adoption of Gross National Happiness as a new way of measuring development, complementary to the GDP. 7. Unitarian Democratic Coalition - It is a coalition of two portuguese parties - the Partido Comunista Português (Portuguese Communist Party) and the Ecological party. The portuguese communist party is a left wing party. It is Marxist -Leninist party and its organization is based on democratic centralism. The party was born in 1921 as the Portuguese section of the International Communist Party. By the end of this decade the party would become illegal by the dictatorship installed in Portugal which lasted for five decades. The Portuguese Communist Party would play an important role against the dictatorship. Since the Portuguese Revolution (April 25th 1974) against dictatorship, the Portuguese Communist Party has been an important political force, being very close to the working class. This party has made alliances at the local level with the Socialist Party. The Partido Ecologista – Os Verdes (The Ecological Party –The Greens) is a left wing ecological party born in 1982. The party's political concerns refer to promoting an active intervention regarding the environment. 8. Communist Party of the Portuguese Workers / Reorganizative Movement of the Portuguese Proletariat - It is generally the biggest of the small parties, although it seldom reaches 1% of the votes. It has no representation in the national parliament. It was founded in 1976 and it is a left wing party, with a maoist inspiration. 9. Republic Democratic Party is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. The PDR was legalized by the Constitutional Court of Portugal on February 11, 2015 and it is a

	member of the European Democratic Party, which was accepted on 5 May 2015. 10. The National Renewal Party is the more extrem right-wing party in Portugal. It is a nationalist party, defending policies against immigration and defending the values of the nation. It was found in 2000 and has no representation in the national parliament. It is a member of the European National Front. 11. Portugal Ahead (Portugal à Frente) is a Portuguese coalition of parties for electoral purposes constituted by the Popular Party and the Social Democratic Center. The Social Democratic Centre – Popular Party is a right wing conservative party that was founded in 1974. This Party has made alliances with the Social Democratic Party. In 1979 this alliance also included the Monarchic Party and was called the "Democratic Alliance". In 2002, when the Social Democratic Party won the legislative elections and after 20 years, another alliance was made with this party, called the "Democratic Coalition". In 2011, the CDS-PP was invited again to form a coalition government with the winning party, Social Democracy Party. The Social Democratic Party is a right centre party, born in 1974, firstly under the name of Partido Popular Democrático (Popular Democratic Party). The party ideological principles are based on Social Democracy. The Social Democratic Party has been, together with the Socialist Party, one of the most important parties in Portugal, i.e., the ones that can get more electoral votes and that, therefore, have won more local and legislative elections. This party has made several alliances with other parties, namely, in 1979 with the Social Democratic Centre – Popular Party and the Monarchic Party, the "Democratic Alliance". In 1985 this party won the legislative elections. Again in 1987 the party won the legislative elections and was the first party after the Portuguese Revolution (April 25th 1974) against dictatorship to get a full majority of the votes. The same would happen in 1991. After 1995 the party won the elections of 2002 with Durão Barroso, with an alliance with Social Democratic Centre – Popular Party. Durão Barroso would then leave to be the President of the European Commission, and due to instability and lack of leadership within the party, elections were called in 2005 and the Socialist party won. The Social Democratic Party has won election again in 2011, forming a government in coalition with the The Social Democratic Centre – Popular Party. 12. Popular Monarchical Party is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament is a Portuguese political party inspired by municipalism and environmentalism, which advocates the restoration of the monarchy in Portugal. It was founded on May 23, 1974, by Gonçalo Ribeiro Telles. 13. Christian Democracy and Citizenship Party is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. It is a Portuguese political party, approved by the Constitutional Court on 1 July 2009 under the name of Portugal pro Vida (PPV), [which defends the principles of the social doctrine of the Church. 14. The Socialist Party is a left centre party, born in 1973 by militants of the Portuguese Socialist Action. After the Portuguese Revolution (April 25th 1974) against dictatorship, the Socialist Party won the first elections (in 1975). Since then, the Socialist Party has been, together with Social Democratic Party, one of the most important parties in Portugal, i.e., the ones that can get more electoral votes and that, therefore, have won more local and legislative elections. In 1983 this party made an alliance with the Social Democratic Party known as Bloco Central (the Central Block), and together they prepared Portugal's entry to the EEC. In 1985 the alliance ended. The Socialist Party has also made alliances at the local level with the Portuguese Communist Party. In 1995 the party won the legislative elections with Prime-Minister António Guterres, who later renounces his duty. In 2002 the Social Democratic Party won the elections. After a serious economic crisis in the country and due to problem of lack of leadership within the party the Socialist Party won the 2005 elections with the majority of the votes. In 2009 it won the elections again, and governed until 2011, when the prime-minister resigned. The Socialist Party is a member of the Internacional Socialista (International Socialist) and of the Partido Socialista Europeu (European Socialist Party). 15. TO ACT (PTP-MAS) is a Portuguese coalition of parties for electoral purposes constituted by the Portuguese Labor Party (PTP) and the Socialist Alternative Movement (MAS), annotated in the Constitutional Court on July 27, 2015. TO ACT was founded as a politician movement led by Joana Amaral Dias. 16. United Party of Retired and Pensioners is a small party, with no representation in the national parliament. It does not position itself to the left, nor to the center, nor to the right of the political spectrum, it defends causes, people and the common good, it has a target audience and the defense of specific interests of a part of the electorate. The party has its origin in the finding, by the founders, that Portugal does not have "associations of retired people who defend" retirees and pensioners, pretending to assume the political voice of the members of this age group.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The Parliament of the Portuguese Republic consists of a single chamber, the Assembleia da República or Assembly of the Republic, composed of 230 members directly elected by universal adult suffrage for a maximum term of four years. Assembly members represent the entire country, rather than the constituencies in which they were elected. Governments require majority support in the Assembly in order to remain in office.

Each one of Portugal's eighteen administrative districts, as well as each one of the country's two autonomous regions - the Açores (Azores) and Madeira - is an electoral constituency. Portuguese voters residing outside the national territory are grouped into two electoral constituencies - Europe and the rest of the world - each one of which elects two Assembly members. The remaining 226 seats are allocated among the national territory constituencies in proportion to their number of registered electors.

Political parties and party coalitions may present lists of candidates. The lists are closed, so electors may not choose individual candidates in or alter the order of such lists. Electors cast a ballot for a single list. The seats in each constituency are apportioned according to the largest average method of proportional representation (PR), conceived by the Belgian mathematician Victor d'Hondt in 1899. There are no legally mandated thresholds that a party must exceed before it is eligible to receive seats.

Description of political parties listed above	1. Serbian Progressive Party (Srpska napredna stranka) is the ruling party in Serbia (in coalition with several other parties). The head of the party - Aleksandar Vučić is also Head of the State (the President). The Party has been formed in 2008, when Tomislav Nikolic, together with Aleksandar Vucic and several other people left radical right wing Serbian Radical Party and formed new one - Serbian Progressive Party. In 2012, Tomislav Nikolic became the President of Serbia, and Serbian Progressive Party, together with Socialist Party of Serbia, New Serbia, Movement of the Strength of Serbia, and Movement of Socialists, made coalition Government. The Party won majority of the seats in Parliament in 2014 and 2016 elections and formed coalition Government with Socialist Party of Serbia and several other smaller parties. In 2017, Aleksandar Vučić became President of Serbia. In 2016 Serbian progressive party proposed Ana Brnabić as first gay Prime Minister. Ideological orientation of the party is national-conservative, populist; the party is pro-EU oriented, but also oriented as pro- Russian. 2. Sociodemocratic Party of Serbia (Socijaldemokratska partija Srbije) has been formed in 2008. The head of the party is Rasim Ljajić, who is also Vice-president and Minister in the Government of Ana Brnabić. Earlier, Rasim Ljajić has been president of the Sandžak democratic party (a party of Bosniaks from Sandžak region in Serbia). At 2008 and 2012 elections the party has been part of the coalition of Democratic party (ruling party until 2012), while at 2014 and 2016 elections they formed coalition with Serbian progressive party. From 2008 until now the Sociodemocratic party of Serbia is the part of the ruling coalitions. Ideological orientation is nominally sociodemocratic. 3. Party of United Pensioners of Serbia (Partija ujedinjenih penzionera Srbije) has been formed in 2005. Although the party primarily gathers pensioners as their members, they also have members of other age groups (including their own youth organizations). In the parliamentary elections in 2008, the party performed independently, then in 2012 and 2014, the party performed in coalition with the Socialist Party of Serbia (SPS) and United Serbia (JS). At the elections in 2016, the party won twelve deputy seats in the Serbian Parliament, as part of the coalition around the ruling Serbian Progressive Party. The party's ideological orientation is sociodemocratic (populists, "the interests of the pensioners").

4. Socialist Party of Serbia (Socijalistička partija Srbije) has been formed in 1990, as successor of Communist Party of Serbia. The first president of the party was Slobodan Milošević. The party was at power from 1990-2000. After year 2000 the party became opposition for the first time, but returned to power in 2008, as part of the coalition government of Democratic party, United Serbia and party of United Pensioners of Serbia. After 2012 elections SPS' chief Ivica Dačić became Prime Minister, forming the Government together with Serbian Progressive Party (although the party won only 14.53% votes). In 2014 elections, the party again entered the Government together with Serbian Progressive Party (Ivica Dačić became Vice-President of the Government and Minister of External Affairs). At 2016 elections SPS won 10.95% of votes, and again entered the government together with Serbian Progressive Party. Ideological orientation of the party is nominally sociodemocratic.

5. Serbian Radical Party (Srpska radikalna stranka) has been formed in 1991, by the unification of the Serbian Chetnik Movement (led by Vojislav Šešelj) and a number of local committees of the National Radical Party (led by Tomislav Nikolić). Head of the party was and still is Vojislav Šešelj, far right politician and paramilitary leader indicted at International War Crime Tribunal in Hague for his role in war crimes in the wars in Croatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, but also in Voivodina. During 1998-2000 period Vojislav Šešelj was Vice-president of the Government. In 2003, Šešelj went to Hague and remained in prison for next 11 years, when he was released due to his health condition. In 2018 Hague Tribunal convicted him for persecution of Croats in Voivodina. After Šešelj went to Hague, his deputy president Tomislav Nikolić assumed de facto leadership of the party until its split in 2008. Nikolić resigned from the SRS over disagreements with Šešelj on the direction of the party and took much of the high-ranking members with him to form the Serbian Progressive Party (SNS). In the Serbian parliamentary election, 2016 the SRS gained 22 seats in the national assembly. It is radical, far right, nationalist party.

6. Democratic party (Demokratska stranka) has been formed in 1919, banned in 1945, and again renewed in 1990. The first president was Dragoljub Mićunović. During the 1990-2000 period it acted as the strongest opposition party to Milošević's regime. In 1993 the head of the party became Zoran Đinđić. As part of Democratic Opposition of Serbia, Democratic Party won parliamentary elections in 2000, and Zoran Đinđić became the Prime Minister in the new government. Đinđić has been killed in 2003. The party returned to power in 2007 (in coalition with G17, League of sociodemocrats of Voivodina and Sociodemocratic party of Serbia, but also with Socialist party of Serbia). Boris Tadić from DP won 2008 presidential elections. Democratic party lost 2012 parliamentary and presidential elections. Since then, DP is acting as opposition party. The party underwent several rounds of splitting: in 1990's Vojislav Koštunica left the party to form Democratic party of Serbia; in 1996 Dragoljub Mićunović formed Democratic center, but rejoined in 2004; in 2004 Čedomir Jovanović left and formed Liberal-democratic party; in 2014 Boris Tadić left and formed his own Sociodemocratic party; in 2015 Borke Stefanović left and formed The Left of Serbia; in 2016 Dragan Đilas left and in 2019 formed The party of freedom and justice. Ideological orientation of the party is left center/sociodemocratic.

7. Serbian Movement Dveri (Doors) is political party, formally formed in 2015, although it exists from 2011 as political group. The group was initially formed as NGO of students gathered around journal "Serbian doors". The party's leader Boško Obradović has been publishing texts in neofascist journal "The New Spark". In the period 2012-2016 Dveri acted as non-parliamentary opposition and at 2016 elections they entered the Parliament and act as parliamentary opposition. Ideology: right wing, nationalism, social conservatism, euroscepticism, protectionism, antiglobalism, clericalism.

8. Democratic Party of Serbia (Demokratska stranka Srbije) is national-conservative, Christian-democratic political party, formed in 1992, when its leader, Vojislav Koštunica (together with several other prominent members) left Democratic party. Together with Serbian Renewal Movement and New Democracy, they formed alliance Democratic Movement of Serbia (DEPOS). Until 2000 the party acted as parliamentary opposition. In year 2000, its head, Vojislav Koštunica, defeated Slobodan Milošević at presidential elections. DSS, as part of Democratic opposition of Serbia also won Parliamentary elections in 2000 and formed coalition government with Democratic party and a number of other opposition parties. In late 2001, DSS split from the coalition. After 2003 parliamentary elections they formed minority government together with G17, New Serbia and Serbian Renewal Movement. Vojislav Koštunica acted as Prime Minister from 2003 till 2008. From 2008 they act as parliamentary opposition.

9. Serbian Renewal Movement (Srpski pokret obnove) is national liberal and monarchist party, formed in 1990 through the merger of Drašković's faction from the Serbian National Renewal (SNO) party and Vojislav Šešelj's Serbian Freedom Movement. Šešelj left the party in 1991 after internal quarrels and founded the Serbian Radical Party. The Democratic Movement of Serbia was formed in May 1992 as a political alliance made up primarily of SPO, New Democracy (ND), Democratic Party of Serbia (DSS). The political alliance however broke, and was dissolved in 1993. The SPO was part of the "Together" (Zajedno) coalition. In early 1999, the SPO joined the Slobodan Milošević-led government, and Drašković became a Yugoslav Deputy Prime Minister. In the midst of the 1999 war, Drašković and the SPO pulled out of the government, calling on Milošević to surrender to NATO. SPO was part of the Vojislav Koštunica cabinet (2003-2008) and Vuk Drašković became Minister of Foreign Affairs. Today, they are marginal party, although they entered the parliament in 2016 elections as part of the Serbian Progressive Party electoral list.

10. New Serbia (Nova Srbija) is a minor populist and monarchist political party in Serbia. It was established in 1998 by a group of dissidents led by Velimir Ilić from the Serbian Renewal Movement (SPO). New Serbia was part of the Democratic Opposition of Serbia (DOS) bloc which defeated Slobodan Milošević in the 2000 presidential election. The party took part in the 2003 parliamentary election in coalition with the Serbian Renewal Movement. The coalition received 7.7% of the popular vote and 22 seats; 9 seats were allocated to New Serbia. New Serbia ran in the 2007 election in coalition with the Democratic Party of Serbia (DSS) and United Serbia (JS). The coalition received 16.55% of the popular vote and 47 seats in parliament, 10 of which went to New Serbia. The party ran again in coalition with the DSS a year later in the 2008 election, receiving 11.62% of votes and 30 seats, with 9 allocated to NS. New Serbia ran in the 2014 election in coalition with the Serbian Progressive Party (SNS) and several other parties. The coalition received 48.2% of the popular vote and 158 seats in parliament, 6 of which went to New Serbia. New Serbia ran in the 2016 election in coalition with the Serbian Progressive Party (SNS) and several other parties. New Serbia holds 1 seat in the Parliament. Ideology: populism, conservatism, Cristian democracy, monarchism, pro-EU.

11. Movement of Socialists (Pokret Socijalista) is a socialist political party in Serbia. Founded in 2008, it is currently led by Aleksandar Vulin, a former member of Yugoslav Left. It is a part of the governing coalition with the Serbian Progressive Party (SNS). It is formed by former members of the Socialist Party of Serbia because they disagreed with the pro-EU policy of the party. However, it was a member of the pro-EU SNS-led coalitions in the 2012 parliamentary election (as part of Let's Get Serbia Moving alliance) and in the 2014 and 2016 parliamentary election. Ideology: left wing populism and left wing nationalism.

12. United Serbia (Jedinstvena Srbija) is a political party in Serbia, based in Jagodina. It was previously a close ally of New Serbia, and was a member of its coalition with the Democratic Party of Serbia. In the 2008 parliamentary election United Serbia won three seats as part of the coalition with the Socialist Party of Serbia and the Party of United Pensioners of Serbia. After the election coalition held unsuccessful talks with former partners Democratic Party of Serbia on forming the parliamentary majority. United Serbia was the first to announce the beginning of talks with the coalition For a European Serbia, led by the President Boris Tadić, on forming the new government. The party leader is Dragan Marković, Mayor of Jagodina. At 2016 elections they entered the parliament as part of the Serbian Progressive Party electoral list. Ideology: national-conservatism, populism, social conservatism, pro-EU.

13. It's Enough-Restart (Dosta je bilo) commonly known in English as Enough is Enough is a Serbian political organization, established on 27 January 2014 around former Minister of Economy Saša Radulović and his associates from the ministry. It took part in Serbian elections in 2014 and 2016. The It's Enough-Restart group in the National Assembly lost three of its members in February 2017, when three deputies left to start an organization called the Civic Platform. This led to new waves of leaving, when deputies formed their own organizations or joined others. By the mid-November 2018, DJB was reduced to only two deputies in the Assembly and no parliamentary club. Ideology: liberalism, reformism, progressivism, euroscepticism.

14. Liberal-democratic party (Liberalno demokratska partija) is a liberal political party in Serbia. The Liberal Democratic Party was founded on 5 November 2005 by former members of the Democratic Party, led by Čedomir Jovanović, who were expelled in 2004. Jovanović had become critical of the new direction of the Democratic Party and its newly elected president, Boris Tadić. The LDP is one of the few political parties in Serbia to actively support Serbia's membership into NATO and the independence of Kosovo. The LDP is also highly supportive of LGBT rights in Serbia. The LDP's first electoral performance was during the 2007 Serbian parliamentary election, the LDP ran in a coalition together with the Civic Alliance of Serbia, the Social Democratic Union and the League of Social Democrats of Vojvodina which collectively received 5.31% of the popular vote. The Civic Alliance would later merged into the LDP the same year. The next election followed a year later, with the LDP receiving only 5.24% of the popular vote, its worst performance to date. The Liberal Democratic Party competed in the 2012 Serbian parliamentary election as part of the U-Turn coalition. The coalition received 6.53% of the popular vote. In the period 2014-2016 LDP acted as non-parliamentary opposition. At 2016 elections, LDP entered the parliament together with League of sociodemocrats of Voivodina and Sociodemocratic Party. Ideology: liberal democracy, economic liberalism, decentralization, regionalism, secularism, anti-nationalism, pro-EU, pro-NATO.

The founder and current leader of the party is Nenad Čanak. The party was founded on 14 July 1990 in Novi Sad. In the first years of its existence, the party's activities were mainly directed towards organization of anti-war actions. Together with other parties, it organized anti-war demonstrations in Vojvodina and publicly opposed mobilization of Vojvodina citizens for the front lines in Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina. By the 1997 the party acted as non-parliamentary opposition. At 2000 elections, LSV entered the Government as the part of Democratic Opposition of Serbia. In the 2003-2007 period they were non parliamentary opposition, and from 2007 till now LSV acts as parliamentary opposition. Ideology: autonomis, regionalism, decentralization, social-democracy, pro-EU.

17. Social Democratic Union (Sociodemokratska unija) was registered on 13 May 1996. It was founded by former members of the Civic Alliance of Serbia, led by Žarko Korać, who opposed forming coalition with the right-wing Serbian Renewal Movement for the 1996 federal election. On 21 April 2002 the SDU merged with Social Democracy (SD) and founded the Social Democratic Party (SDP). A year later, disenchanted members of the SDP, led by Žarko Korać, left and re-founded the SDU on 29 March 2003. In the 2014 election the SDU was again part of the coalition around Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) but the coalition failed to enter the parliament. From 2014 the party acts as non-parliamentary opposition. In the 2018 Belgrade local election the SDU went as part of the Ne davimo Beograd electoral list which won 3.44% and failed to pass the electoral threshold. Ideology: social democracy, pro-EU.

18. Sociodemocratic party (Sociodemokratska stranka) is a parliamentary political party in Serbia. The party was founded and is headed by Boris Tadić, who was previously president of the Democratic Party and the former President of Serbia. Between June and October 2014, the name of the party was the New Democratic Party. 2. Electoral system
Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	Elections for National Assembly are being held each 4 years, which is the period of mandate of one convocation of the National Assembly. In addition to these regular, extraordinary elections are also possible, which are carried out when the National Assembly is dissolved by the decree of the President of the Republic in the cases specified by the Constitution. Elections for deputies are announced by the President of the Republic. The last National Assembly elections were held in 2016.

Elections are held in the Republic of Serbia as one constituency, by voting for the electoral lists on the basis of a proportional election system. Parliamentary mandates are being distributed in proportion to the number of votes that the electoral lists have won at elections.

The right to elect members of the deputies and to be elected as deputies are business-capable citizens of the Republic of Serbia who have reached 18 years of age and who have registered residence in the territory of the Republic of Serbia. Candidates for deputies may propose registered political parties, coalitions of political parties or a group of citizens.

In the distribution of parliamentary mandates, only the electoral lists that have passed the so-called electoral censorship, ie received at least 5% of the votes from the total number of voters who voted. There are two exceptions to this rule. The first exception is the electoral lists of political parties of national minorities, which the Republic Electoral Commission, upon their request, recognized this status in the elections, on the basis of which they do not have to pass the election census, but in the distribution of parliamentary mandates, regardless of the number of votes (the so-called natural threshold principle), which, however, is not a guarantee that the parliamentary mandate will actually be allocated to them during the distribution. The second exception exists in a situation in which no electoral list has received at least 5% of voters' votes; in this case, the mandates are distributed among all electoral lists. Each electoral list belongs to the number of seats that is proportional to the number of votes received. The mandates are distributed by applying the largest coefficient system (the so-called D'Ontov system), by dividing the total number of votes each individual electoral list is given by numbers from one to 250. The obtained quotients are sorted by size and taking into account the 250 largest quotient. Each election list receives as many mandates as the largest quotients it belongs to among the top 250.

MP mandates are allocated to candidates from electoral lists. When the assembly confirms the mandates of deputies, deputies (and not the political parties) become the bearers of the mandates. This means that one deputy could enter the Assembly on one list (or as a member of one party), but during his mandate to change his/hers party affiliation. In this way the party composition of the Assembly may or may not reflect electoral results. Also, deputies could enter the Parliament as members of electoral lists, but need not to be members of specific parties. For example, in the table above (Z1.3) is given the the percentage of mandates for each electoral list on the basis of the % of votes won at the 2016 elections. Current composition of the Serbian National Assembly is the following:

Serbian Progressive Party (36.4%)
Serbian Radical Party (8.8%)
Socialist Party of Serbia (8%)
Democratic Party (5.2%)
Sociodemocratic Party of Serbia (4%)
Party of United Pensioners of Serbia (3.6%)
United Serbia (2.4%)
Serbian Movement Dveri (2.4%)
Liberal-democratic Party (1.6%)
Alliance of Voivodina's Hungarians (1.6%)
Socio-democratic Party (1.6%)
League of Sociodemocrats of Voivodina (1.2%)
People's Party (1.2%)
Movement of Socialists (1.2%)
Serbian People's Party (1.2%)
Democratic Party of Serbia (0.8%)
Together for Serbia (0.8%)
Movement the Strenght of Serbia (0.8%)
Serbian Renewal Movement (0.8%)
Party of Democratic Action of Sandžak (0.8%)
Justice and Recinciliation Party (0.8%)
Better Serbia (0.4%)
Democratic Alliance of Croats in Voivodina (0.4%)
Green Party (0.4%)
Greens of Serbia 0.4%)
Communist Party (0.4%)
People's Peasant Party (0.4%)
New Serbia (0.4%)
New Party (NOVA)(0.4%)
Party for Democratic Action (0.4%)
Movement for the Kingdom of Serbia Renewal (0.4%)
United Peasants Party (0.4%)
Independant deputies (10.4%)

The executive power in the Republic of Serbia is vested in the Government. The Government is composed of the President of the Government (Prime Minister), one or more Vice Presidents and Ministers with portfolios. The Government may have Ministers without portfolio. The number of Vice Presidents of the Government and Ministers without portfolio is determined by the National Assembly upon each election of the Government, at the proposal of the candidate for the President of the Government.

The Government is elected by the National Assembly after each constitution, at proposal of candidate for Prime Minister. The National Assembly decides on the choice of the Government as a whole. The government is elected by a majority of the votes of the total number of MPs. The Government's term of office is terminated by termination of the National Assembly term of office, vote of no confidence, resignation of Government, vote of no-confidence in President of the Government and resignation of President of the Government. The law on the government is provided here: <http://www.legislationline.org/documents/id/15793>.

Description of political parties listed above	1. PP (Conservatives, right wing). Originally named Alianza Popular, it was founded in 1976 by Manuel Fraga (a former Minister of Franco's regime). It was relaunched in 1989 adopting a new denomination: People's Party. It was the incumbent party between 1996 and 2000 (minority government), 2000 – 2004 (majority government), being J.M. Aznar, the Prime Minister. It won the 2011 general elections (186 seats) and Mariano Rajoy became Prime Minister. The PP also won the 2015 elections but it failed to obtain enough parliamentary support to form government, so new general elections were held in June 2016. Mariano Rajoy was ousted in a no confidence vote in Parliament in June 2018, Pedro Sánchez (PSOE) became Prime Minister and shortly after that Pablo Casado, the current leader of the party was elected. 2. PSOE (Socialdemocrats, centre-left). It was founded in 1879 by Pablo Iglesias. In its 28th Congress (1979) the party agreed to move away from its Marxist ideology. It was the incumbent party between 1982 and 1993 (majority governments) and between 1993-1996 (minority government). During that time, Prime Minister was Felipe González. The PSOE also ruled between 2004 and 2011 (minority government, 110 seats in the Congress of Deputies), with José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero as Prime Minister. He ruled with the support of ad-hoc legislative majorities. After losing two consecutive general elections in 2011 and 2015, there was a renewal in the party leadership and Pedro Sánchez became the new leader of the party. The difficult political negotiations and the decision of the majority of the party to allow a conservative government after the 2016 elections made him resign, but he would later regain the leadership of the party in the 2017 internal elections. In 2018 Pedro Sánchez became the Prime Minister after Mariano Rajoy lost a vote of no confidence. The PSOE won the 2019 April general elections, but was unable to form a parliamentary majority that would support a government. It also won the 2019 November general election and this time it did manage to form a government in coalition with Unidas Podemos. 3. Unidos Podemos is a left-wing electoral alliance formed by Podemos, United Left and other small left-wing parties in May 2016 to contest the 2016 Spanish general election. Later on it became Unidas Podemos (i.e. using the feminine form of "Unidos") to contest the April 2019 general elections. 4. Podemos (Left-wing). Podemos originated in the aftermath of the 15M or Indignados protests. It was founded in January 2014. In the European Parliament elections in 2014, Podemos received 8% of the total vote and quickly grew in the electoral support anticipated by election polls and in its presence in the media (especially his leader, Pablo Iglesias). The party and its leaders repeatedly present Podemos as a citizens' platform appealing people with no ideology or from the two sides of the ideological spectrum. Despite this, general population surveys carried out by CIS show that the electorate clearly places it in the left (average of 2-2,5 on a scale from 1-10). In the 2015 general elections it became the third most voted party in Spain, and in the 2016 elections it kept this position (this time it ran the elections in coalition with United Left, with the name of Unidos Podemos). Even if it lost votes in both the April and November 2019 general elections, it gained protagonism as its support was necessary for a left-wing government to be formed. 5. Ciudadanos/Ciutadans (Center/ against nationalist/secessionist movements). It was formed in Catalonia in July 2006 in response to the call made in a manifesto by a group of well-known figures in Catalanian civic society. This manifesto called for forming a new political party which was not "another" representative of the Catalan nationalism, and that would defend the use of Spanish in Catalonia. In addition to its opposition to nationalist-separatist movements, the party has insisted on themes such as the struggle against corruption. Since the 2014 European elections it has run state-wide and sub-national elections in all Autonomous Communities, as well as the 2015 and 2016 general elections, becoming thus a state-wide party. When it started competing at the state-wide elections it tried to avoid defining itself as either right or left: according to CIS surveys it was located around position 6 (average) by the electorate on a 1-10 scale. Later on its stances and government alliances leaned mostly to the right, and its perception by the electorate also reflected this placing it now on an average around position 7 on a 1-10 left-right scale.

6. IU (Left-wing). Founded in 1986, the IU is a political coalition made up of leftist, greens, socialist, left-wing republicans and the Communist Party of Spain (PCE). In Catalonia, it takes part in general elections forming a coalition with Initiative for Catalonia (Iniciativa per Catalunya-Verds, now known as ICV), which is an ecosocialist party based in Catalonia. Its current leader is Alberto Garzón. In the term 2011-15 IU was part of the parliamentary group named the Plural Left, and it has 11 seats in the Spanish lower chamber (Congress of Deputies), including 2 from ICV and 1 seat from Chunta Aragonesista, a small left-wing regionalist party from Aragón). Since 2016 it has contended all general elections as part of Unidos-as/Podemos, together with Podemos.

7. En Comú Podem is an electoral coalition formed by Podemos, Barcelona en Comú, Initiative for Catalonia Greens and United and Alternative Left, led by the Mayor of Barcelona, Ada Colau, and formed in October 2015 to contest the 2015 Spanish general election in Catalonia. In May 2019 it managed to retain the local government of Barcelona. It has also participated in the 2016, and both general elections that took place in 2019.

8. Más País ("More Country"). Political party and electoral platform formed by Íñigo Errejón as an extension of Más Madrid, which had been created to take part in the May 2019 Regional/Local elections in Madrid. The main aim of Más País was to contest the November 2019 general election and attract dissatisfied centre-left voters over the failure in the government formation process between the Spanish Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE) and Unidas Podemos. Íñigo Errejón was one of the founders of Podemos.

9. Compromís was founded in 2010. It is a left-wing regionalist political party, based in the Comunidad Valenciana. It was originally an electoral coalition made up of the Valencian Nationalist Bloc, the left-wing Valencian People's Initiative, and environmentalist parties.

10. ERC -(pro Catalan independence, left). It was founded in 1931. The ERC ruled in Catalonia during the Second Spanish Republic. The ERC declared an independent Catalan Republic in 1931 and again in 1934. The party has a clear stand for Catalonia's secession from Spain. Its leader is Oriol Junqueres. In the 2012 Catalan regional elections it became for the first time the second largest party in the Catalan parliament, replacing the PSC (Partit dels Socialistes Catalans), the Catalan branch of the PSOE.

11. Junts per Catalunya (pro Catalan independence, center-right) is a political party in Catalonia centred around former President of the Generalitat of Catalonia Carles Puigdemont. It was formed as an electoral alliance of the Catalan European Democratic Party (PDeCAT), successor of the Democratic Convergence of Catalonia, and other independent candidates to contest the 2017 Catalan regional election. Convergència Democràtica de Catalunya- Partit Demòcrata Europeu Català (PDeCAT):

The predecessor of both Junts and PDeCAT was Convergència Democràtica de Catalunya (Democratic Convergence of Catalonia). Founded in the wake of the Spanish transition to democracy, Convergència was the major partner in the long-standing coalition Convergence and Union (CiU), together with Unió Democràtica de Catalunya (UDC, Democratic Union of Catalonia). While the CDC was a more liberal party, UDC could be considered a Christian democratic party. CiU ruled in the regional government of Catalonia between 1983 and 2003 and again, since 2010. In 2012, CDC adopted a position in favour of the secession of Catalonia from Spain, which was not shared by UDC. This eventually led to their split in 2015. Once CiU split, in the 2015 Spanish general election, the party ran as the main member of the Democracy and Freedom, and later on the 2016 general elections as CDC.

12. BNG (Galician Nationalist Bloc) is a political coalition of left-wing Galician nationalist parties. Formed in 1982, under the guidance of historical leader Xosé Manuel Beiras, the BNG calls for further devolution of powers to the Parliament of Galicia and the official and unambiguous[a] recognition of Galicia as a nation.

13. EAJ-PNV (Partido Nacionalista Vasco/Basque Nationalist Party, Basque nationalist-centre). It was founded by Sabino Arana in 1895. Originally, it was a Catholic conservative party and it sought the self-government for the Basque Country. After transition to democracy, the PNV became the largest party in the Basque Country. The party has led the Basque regional government for a long period from initial Basque autonomy in the early 1980s until 2009, and again from 2012 and 2016. It has also played an important role in the Spanish Congress of Deputies, along with other nationalist parties.

14. EH-Bildu (pro Basque independence, left wing). EH Bildu, short for Euskal Herria Bildu (English: Basque Country Gather) is a leftist, Basque nationalist and pro-independence political coalition active in the Spanish autonomous communities of Basque Country and Navarre. EHB's predecessor Bildu ("Gather") was launched in April 2011 to take part in the May 2011 local elections. It was formed as a reaction to the Supreme Court of Spain's ruling in March 2011 that barred the new left-wing Basque nationalist (Abertzale left) Sortu party from electoral participation.

EH-B was created in 2012 with several founding components: Eusko Alkartasuna, Aralar, Alternatiba, Sortu, and independents of the Abertzale left (groups and independent individuals from the Basque leftist-nationalist milieu, many of whom had been members of Batasuna). Batasuna was a secessionist party that did not reject the strategy and actions of terrorist band ETA.

15. CC-PCN is the electoral coalition formed by Coalición Canaria and Partido Nueva Canaria to run the general elections in 2011, 2015 and in 2016.

CC (nationalist, centre/centre-right). It was founded in 1993, and formed from a grouping of different parties (Agrupaciones Independientes de Canarias, Iniciativa Canaria Nacionalista, Asamblea Majorera, Partido Nacionalista Canario, Centro Canario Independiente). The main

	goal of the CC is to get greater self-government for the Canary Islands. The party has ruled the regional government in the Canary Islands since 1993 until 2019. PNC-Partido Nueva Canaria is a center-left Canarian nationalist party created in 2009 after a split from Coalición Canaria. 16. Vox (far right/radical-right). It was founded in December 2013 as a split from the People's Party. The party platform sought to rewrite the constitution to abolish regional autonomy and parliaments. It has also placed a tough reaction to the demands of Catalanian independentist parties at the center of its electoral strategy. Starting with a focus in economically liberal stances and recentralization proposals, the focus of their message shifted towards stances compatible with European right-wing populism, endorsing anti-Islam as well as criticism of multiculturalism. Their view of European Union is that of a soft euroscepticism, arguing that Spain should make no sovereignty concessions to the EU. Vox is considered antifeminist and wants to repeal the gender violence law which they consider discriminatory against men. The party went from having no representation in the lower Parliamentary chamber to achieving 24 deputies in the April 2019 general elections and 52 in the ones that took place in November 2019. 17. Navarra Suma (right/ regionalist) is a joint list in Navarre formed by Navarrese People's Union (UPN), Citizens (Cs) and the People's Party (PP) ahead of the 2019 Spanish general and local elections, as well as the concurrent Navarrese regional election. [The agreement was formally presented as a UPN–Cs alliance, with UPN integrating some PP members within its reserved posts in the alliance's lists as a result of a previous agreement between the two parties. 18. PACMA was founded in 2003. It is focused on animal rights and animal welfare. Although it has not managed to obtain parliamentary representation so far neither at the regional nor at the national level, it is one of the non-parliamentary parties with a highest number of votes. 19. CUP (Secessionist Catalan, extreme left). Traditionally the CUP concentrated on local politics but in 2012, the CUP decided for the first time to run for Catalan parliamentary elections, gaining 3 MPs out of 135. In the 2015, elections they obtained 10 MPs. The CUP is made up of autonomous local assemblies representing towns or neighbourhoods. These assemblies may have some ideological differences, but their common ground is independence for the Catalan Countries and clear left-wing politics, often in the form of anti-capitalism, socialism, and eco-socialism. On both the local and national level, decisions are made in assembly according to the principles of deliberative democracy. 20. PRC (regionalist, centre-right). The PRC originated in the Association in Defense of the Interests of Cantabria (ADIC), founded on 14 May 1976, with the objective of promoting Cantabrian autonomy. Except for the period between 2011 and 2015, it has been held regional government in Cantabria. It has not contended most of the general elections, but decided to do so in April 2019 and November 2019, obtaining one deputy in both occasions.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	Yes
Two or more votes registered:	No
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	The legislature Spain (Cortes Generales) consists two chambers, the Congreso de los Diputados or Congress of Deputies, and an upper house, the Senado or Senate. Congress has greater legislative power than the Senate. The Congress of Deputies is composed of 350 members directly elected by universal adult suffrage for a four-year term of office. Each one of Spain's fifty provinces is a constituency entitled to an initial minimum of two seats while the cities of Ceuta and Melilla elect one member each. The remaining 248 seats are allocated among the fifty provinces in proportion to their populations. Parties, federations, coalitions and agrupaciones de electores (electors' groups) may present candidates or lists of candidates in each constituency. The lists are closed, so electors may not choose individual candidates or alter the order of candidates in such lists. Electors cast a ballot for a single list, or for a single candidate in Ceuta and Melilla. The seats in each constituency are apportioned using the d'Hondt formula 1899. In order to participate in the allocation of seats, a list must receive at least three percent of all valid votes cast in the constituency, including blank ballots. The single-member seats in Ceuta and Melilla are filled by the plurality or first-past-the-post method, i.e. the candidate obtaining the largest number of votes in the constituency is elected..

Description of political parties listed above	1. Swiss People's Party ==> Right, conservative Founded in 1936 from an association of farmers and artisans, this party became more and more populist, especially its rightwing. Since the 1990's, they adopted certain anti-foreigner positions from the far-right. The Swiss People's Party considered itself during longtime as an opposition party. Since 2015 however, they have not only two members in the Federal Council (7 members in total) but they are also the biggest political party in terms of share of votes and hence can take quite a lot of influence. In this sense, the Swiss People's Party is now a full ruling party. Nevertheless, the party is still presenting itself as a political force which stands in opposition to the power of the media, the intellectuals, or the great money, and maintains critical distance to the government. While in terms of vote share they form the biggest political party in Switzerland, they are outreached by the Christian Democrats and the "FDP.The Liberals" in terms of membership. In the national elections of 2015, they regained a share of electorate of almost 30%, after a slight decrease in the previous elections. In the general assembly they form their own parliamentary group (fraction) in alliance with the Lega (2 seats), the Geneva Citizen's Movement (1 seat) and one independant councillor, resulting in a total of 74 seats. In the National Council they hold 68 out of 200 seats and in the Council of States 6 out of 46 seats. 2. Social Democratic Party ==> Centre-left (Former English translation: Socialist Party) As a merge of several cantonal workers' parties, the Social Democratic Party has been founded in 1888. It is currently the most pro-european party in Switzerland. It ranks fourth in terms of membership, but is the second biggest party in terms of votes and seats (55) in the General Assembly. The Social Democrats also form their own parliamentary group in the General Assembly. They currently hold 43 seats in the National Council and 12 seats in the Council of States.They are represented in the Federal Council by two members. 3. FDP.The Liberals (Radical Liberals, NEW since 2009) ==> Right, conservative After some years of political alliance between the Radicals and the much smaller Liberal Party, in January 2009, they merged to form the new party "FDP. The Liberals". The former FDP was founded in 1894, growing out of the liberal, radical and democratic movements that dominated the first decades of the federal state. The Liberal Party equally has roots going back as far as to the 19th century and as developed mainly in French-speaking Switzerland. As well as its predecessors, "FDP. The Liberals" relies on classical liberalism. The party has two members in the Federal Council, holds 33 seats in the National Council and 13 seats in the Council of States. FDP.The Liberals also form their own parliamentary group in the General Assembly. With 120'000 members, it has by far the highest number of membership of all Swiss parties. 4. Christian Democratic Party ==> Centre-right, conservative (Former translation: Christian Democrats) This party was founded by conservative Catholics, who lost the short civil war of 1847. Nevertheless, they are currently also present in protestant cantons, with more eccentric positions. They claim for a social market economy. It is the second largest party in terms of membership, but the smallest of the four government parties in terms of votes and seats. The Christian Democrats have one Federal Councillor. Together with the Evangelical People's Party (2 seats) and the Christian Social Party Obwalden (1 seat) they form a parliamentary group in the General Assembly. They hold 31 seats in the National Council and 13 seats in the Council of States. 5. Green Party ==> Left, centre left Born from the environmental movement, this party was founded in 1983 and gained strength throughout the 1980s. It is the strongest party not represented in the national executive government. They currently hold 12 seats in the National Council and form their own faction. In the Council

of States they are represented with 1 seat.

6. Green Liberal Party ==> Centre, liberal
Founded in 2007, they immediately won a seat in the Council of States and three in the National Council. Since then, they successfully expanded in the cantonal elections. Sharing the idea of environmentalism with the Green Party, its party program differs strongly with respect to regulation of the economy. It aims to combine moderate economic liberalism, liberalism on civil liberties and environmental sustainability.
They hold 7 seats in the National Council and form their own parliamentary group (faction).

7. Conservative Democratic Party ==> Centre right (NEW since 2008)
(Former English translation: Bourgeois (Conservative)-Democratic Party of Switzerland)
The Conservative Democratic Party was created in November 2008 as a split of the Swiss People's Party.
The Swiss People's Party (UDC, SVP) becoming more and more populist, some members split off and create the more moderate "Conservative Democratic Party of Switzerland". They stand for conservative values and economic liberalism.
From 2008 to 2015 the party was represented in the National Executive by a Federal Councillor (Eveline Widmer-Schlumpf). Currently it has 7 seats in the National Council and one in the Council of States.
This party is represented by its own faction in the national parliament.

8. Evangelical's People Party ==> Centre
Founded in 1919, this small protestant party takes a centre-left position on some issues (redistribution, education, immigration, environment), but is conservative on others (abortion, family, euthanasia). The economic position is centrist.
They are aligned with the Christian Democrats, being in the same parliamentary group on the national level.
They currently hold two seats in the National Council.

9. Federal Democratic Union ==> Far right, conservative
The Christian, national-conservative Federal Democratic Union lost their only seat in parliament in the 2011 elections, while they won two seats in the 2003 elections and one in 2007. They stand for value-oriented, biblical positions and strongly refuse European integration of Switzerland.

10. Ticino League ==> Far right, isolationist
Founded in 1991, this very populist party was created on the model of the Italian Lega Lombarda. It defends national conservative and isolationist positions. It is one of the major parties in the Canton of Ticino.
With their two seats in the National Council they belong to the Swiss People's Party faction.

This party was founded in 1944 by the illegal Communist Party of Switzerland.
In 2011, they lost their only seat in the parliament and are no longer represented.

12. Movement of the Citizens of French-speaking Switzerland (Mouvement des Citoyens Romand, MCR) ==> Far right
In 2005, a member of the Swiss People's Party and a former member of the Liberal Party founded the (local) patriotic protest party "Mouvement des Citoyens Genevois". After their first appearance in national elections in 2007 in the canton of Geneva, in 2011 they participated also in the canton of Vaud.
They bring forward anti-foreigner positions, especially against frontier workers from France. Contrarily, they take traditionally leftist stances in social welfare discourses.
They are represented by one seat in the National Parliament belonging to the parliamentary group of the Swiss People's Party.

After the disintegration of the feminist groups in the cantons of Basel and Zurich and the joining together of the Green Party and the Alternative Party of the canton of Zug, in 2007, only the Alternatives of Zurich participated in the national elections. In 2011, together with other small groups that so far mainly had campaigned in cantonal elections, they registered as the loose formation of the "Alternative Left". Hence, their political programme generally can be described as traditional leftist, with particularly accentuated stances in the field of sexual discrimination. Election lists were presented in the cantons of Zurich (1.0% of votes), Basel(-), Berne (.5%), Schaffhausen (-) and Valais (.6%).
They are not represented in the National Council nor in the Council of States.

14. Pirate Party Switzerland ==> Center, liberal, thematic
The Swiss Pirate Party has been founded in 2009. Its positions are mainly thematic such as legislation of the internet and transparency of the state. In their first national elections, they won a total of .5% of votes, being listed in seven cantons: Zurich (share of votes in the canton: .9%), Berne (.7), Freiburg (.6%), Basel-City (1.9%), Aargau (0.8%). They hold no seats in the two national parliaments.

GENERAL ABOUT ALLIANCES:

Concerning the political alliances between parties and except the factions (parliamentary groups) described above, there are important variations between the Cantons and they are built and broken according to the treated subjects. In general, the small parties join their forces with bigger ones in order to defend a subject. The Greens and the Socialists often form a camp, the so-called Bourgeois parties another group. In several Cantons the Swiss People's Party align with Radicals, whereas in other cantons Radicals are more close to Christian-Democrats.

GENERAL ABOUT SWISS PARTIES

It was relatively late that political trends of the 19th century developed into actual party organizations in Switzerland. Its history, political and cultural boundaries between cantons and its electoral system have had as consequence the emergence of many political parties. The four main parties are: the FDP, The Liberals, the Christian-Democrats, the Social-Democrats and the Swiss People's Party. Contrary to what happened in Germany, Austria and Italy, the Radical Liberal Party has remained powerful: the permanency of radicalism is even one of the peculiarities of Swiss politics. Apart from these four parties that are represented by many members of the Federal Council and which represent the main tendencies at a national

	level, there are numerous small parties which sometimes have only regional significance. The so-called bourgeois groups are clearly dominated by the Radical Party (FDP) which developed from the Liberal- and Radical Democrats who created the Modern Federal State in the 19th century. The only liberal conservative party which is slightly different of them is the Swiss Liberal Party, which disappeared from the national level in 2009 and continues to exist on the cantonal level. The Swiss People's Party (SVP) developed as a farmer's branch of the mainstream liberal movement. The National Association of Independent (LdU), which is closely allied to the largest retail concern in Switzerland, calls itself social-liberal. The Christian Democratic People's Party (CVP) dominates the field of confessional and social parties; it has a trades-allied wing and a Christian-social wing. The other party with a definite confessional character, the Evangelic People's Party (EVP), is far smaller. The mainstream within the socialist movement is represented by the Swiss Social Democratic Party (SPS). There are also groups further to the left, movements on the extreme right with a low number of supporters, and various "Green" groups, generally positioned at centre left, except the Green liberal party which constitutes a new trend.

Number of votes registered in the election for primary legislative assembly at the national level:
Only one single vote registered:	No
Two or more votes registered:	Yes
Description of the electoral system for this assembly:	ELECTORAL SYSTEM for the legislative assembly at the national level:Switzerland has a two-chamber parliament: The National Council and the Council of States, together referred to as the Federal Assembly, constitute the legislative power in the federal state. The National Council represents the population as a whole, the Council of States the individual cantons. The National Council gives a rather true picture of the electorate, in spite of the reapportionment in cantons. On the contrary, the Council of the States, because of the system of the majority vote, comprises few Social-Democrats (Socialist Party) and Swiss People's Party and many Radicals and Christian-Democrats. also see www.ch.ch and www.parlament.chThe National Council comprises 200 members who represent the Swiss people. The individual cantons are represented in proportion to the number of their inhabitants. Each canton is a constituency, and each returns at least one member. The National Council is elected using a system of proportional representation, whereby each party is allocated a number of seats in proportion to its numerical strength. The candidates who receive the highest number of votes obtain the seats won by their party. Unlike majority voting, proportional representation allows smaller parties to obtain a seat in parliament. The election of the National Council takes place every 4 years, on the second last Sunday in October. The members are elected for a term of 4 years, while re-elections are possible. The Council of States is made up of 46 representatives of the Swiss cantons. Each canton returns two members, with the exception of the smaller cantons of Obwalden, Nidwalden, Basel-Stadt, Basel-Landschaft, Appenzell Ausserrhoden and Appenzell Innerrhoden, which have one representative each. The elections are carried out according to cantonal legal rules. In most Cantons it is a majoritarian election system, only in two cantons it is proportional.
